SENTENCE DE MARCO AFTER GUILTY PLEA TO HARBORING BOY

Eliminates Trial; Prosecutor Agrees To Lesser Charge

WARREN, O., March 21.—John DeMarco, of Youngstown, alleged racketeer, today was sentenced to from one to twenty years in prison on a charge of harboring a kidnaped boy in connection with abduction of James DeJute, 12, Niles, O., school boy.

A plea of guilty was entered for DeMarco when County Prosecutor G. H. Birrell agreed to withdraw a second indictment charging the man with kidnaping for extortion, and carrying a possible life sentence.

The guilty plea to the lesser charge was offered after Dowell Hargraves, found with De Marco, standing guard over James in an abandoned house near Youngstown, was given a life term.

Hargraves was identified as one of the actual kidnapers. De Marco was accused as a participant in the kidnaping plot as a guard over the abducted boy.

Attorneys for De Marco asked that the major indictment be nolle. Birrell refused, saying he would dismiss the charge when he leaves office at the end of the year. The defense agreed.

Birrell said he desired to hold the indictment in event new evidence is obtained. James had testified De Marco was not one of the men who seized him on a Niles street as he went to school.

Judge Lynn B. Griffith sentenced De Marco. He also sentenced Hargraves, reviewing "an increase in this kind of crime" and mentioning the widespread public anxiety created by abduction of the son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, which occurred just 10 hours before James was seized.

CHANGE SALES TAX TO APPEASE FOES

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Leaders of both parties in the house tried again today to appease the rampaging members who struck three body blows at the billion-dollar tax bill and now are planning three more.

Acting Chairman Crisp called a meeting of the ways and means committee to work out additional concessions in an effort to save the 2 1/2 per cent sales tax, heart of the committee's tax program.

The sales tax will be taken up on the floor tomorrow. Today leaders brought a score of minor bills before the house, hoping that delay might cool this militant sales tax opposition.

JOINT COMMISSION TO AGREE ON PEACE

SHANGHAI, March 21.—China and Japan reached a temporary truce in their conflict over control of Shanghai when both sides agreed to refer details of a peace pact to a joint commission.

Japanese councilors paved the way to an understanding by agreeing to Chinese demands that all the Mikado's troops withdraw from Shanghai, leaving Chinese defensive forces in their present positions outside the city.

The truce was reached with unexpected suddenness after a day of inactivity when both sides agreed to the peace conferences. Meanwhile, Japanese already had begun withdrawal of her military and naval forces.

RESIGNATION ASKED
CELINA, O., March 21.—Prosecutor John R. Pierce, under indictment in Federal Court in Toledo, has been requested to resign his office by the Democratic executive committee of Mercer County.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

THIS spring agreed Xenians Sunday. And they were right, because at 2:45 p. m. winter was over and spring made its official debut.

Temperatures ranged from a minimum of 23 degrees to a maximum of 51 degrees Sunday and rain that fell in the evening measured .04 of an inch. Weatherman Ernest L. Harner reported.

The weather will be mild during the next few days, and possibly for the remainder of March, forecasters indicated, although more rain, probably turning to snow, may materialize Monday in the north portion of the state.

Nice To Be In Jail Says Mary, Who Never Was

NEW YORK, March 21.—Everybody goes to bed early in Hollywood, the depression brings out the finer things in life, and it's a "privilege" to be in jail, Mary Pickford told 600 inmates of the workhouse on Welfare Island here.

The screen star was one of the season's Sunday lecture attractions for the prisoners who listened attentively but laughed at the reference to the advantages of living in jail.

FEAR OF KIDNAPERS GROWS AS SOLUTION CONTINUES REMOTE

Neighbor Reports Attempt; Johnson Still Held

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 21.—Racketeers in stolen cars, illicit liquor deals, prowlers, and reports of additional abduction attempts, have increased fears of kidnapers among neighbors of the anxious Lindberghs—but have not produced one tangible bit of evidence in the kidnaping of the Lindberghs' own baby.

Beverly Longstreth, a former Kansan, is the latest to report what he believed might have been kidnaping attempts. The reported attempts preceded the Lindbergh crime. Since that crime, a bodyguard and four dogs have watched over the Longstreth children seven miles from here.

The prowler who attempted to enter the nursery at the J. Seward Johnson home near New Brunswick Saturday morning, has not been identified—and that attempt has added to the tension prevailing over a wide area hereabouts.

Prowlers at the Longstreth home were believed by Longstreth to have planned the kidnaping of one of his children, two girls, 4 and 8, and two boys, 12 and 14.

In January, Longstreth revealed, the butler, William Gray, was awakened by the barking of police dogs. A prowler on the front porch fled when lights were turned on.

Less than a week later, the dogs again awakened the butler. He slipped downstairs, and through a window saw two men attempting to open a French door leading to the porch.

The butler awakened Longstreth. Then the two took shotguns and went downstairs. They stood near the French doors ready to fire.

Cyrus, 12, then awakened and turned on a light upstairs. The lookout for the two prowlers sounded a signal, and the men fled.

Longstreth hired a bodyguard for the children, and sought two more dogs which he placed in their rooms at night. He did not report the incident to police until yesterday during investigation of a stolen automobile kidnapping ring believed operating in the vicinity.

Colonel H. Norman Schwartzkopf, in command of state police, announced that two men held in connection with an automobile found hidden under hay near the

SOCIETY LEADER, ON HUNT OF ADVENTURE, TRAPPED IN ALASKA

Mrs. Edward Biddle,
Marooned By Snow,
Wants Plane

NENANA, Alaska, March 21.—Snowbound in the Alaskan interior by heavy winter drifts, Mrs. Edward Biddle, adventurous Philadelphia society leader, sent out a call across the blizzard swept northland today for a rescue plane.

Mrs. Biddle has been marooned since January 12 in the little cabin of Fannie Quigley, noted huntress and frontier woman, at the bleak outpost of Kantishna, far off the path of mail planes and even dog sleds.

As a result, a mail plane will give up its regular run to Diamond some time this week and fly to the socialite's retreat, officials here said.

Intent on collecting material for a book, Mrs. Biddle dropped in on Fannie Quigley for a social call and an interview. A blizzard sprang up, obliterating dog trails and forced her to remain in the cabin.

Her whereabouts were a mystery until word filtered through from the outpost.

Attired in parka and mittens, Mrs. Biddle has made several short trips around Kantishna and apparently has thoroughly enjoyed her experience, word reaching here indicated.

Mrs. Biddle's plight became known when her guide, Mike Cooney, veteran Irish dog musher, who had tried vainly to break a trail between Kantishna and Nenana for more than a month, finally succeeded.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—Edward Biddle, Philadelphia attorney whose socially prominent wife has been snowbound in an Alaskan village for several weeks, said today he has little fear for her safety.

"It quite evidently is a problem of transportation. She merely will be delayed," he said.

Mrs. Biddle left Seattle, Wash., December 15 for Alaska planning to satisfy a life-long desire for adventure. She wished to study at first hand where life as city women view it, its "hard on women."

She wanted to collect material for a book on the life of the Alaskan women. She had a theory that the modern city women is missing much, while the woman in more primitive surroundings is not.

In Alaska, her husband said, she has learned to handle the sled and dogs; she saw a man "shot down" in cold blood in a dance hall—a stunt enacted for her benefit, she learned. She has encountered snow deeper than she ever dreamed of and temperatures of 40 degrees below zero; she has seen women running their trap lines with their husbands, and "mushing" with perfection.

Biddle said that the next stage in his wife's Alaskan trip was to have been an airplane journey into the Porcupine River territory, in the extreme north of Alaska.

He said the call for help must have been made in order that she might complete her trip before the spring thaws make airplane travel impossible. She wants to get to Yukon in time to watch the sudden spectacular breakup of the winter's ice.

Redlands, Calif., Mar. 21.—Toll of an accident which wrecked an American Airways liner near here Saturday night stood at seven lives today, after death of the one passenger who was not killed instantly.

Arthur R. Thomas, Tucson, Ariz., died in a Redlands hospital yesterday. Six other occupants were killed as the big plane, flying low through a dense fog, struck a high tension wire ten miles east of here and burst into flames as it hit the ground.

Thomas was taken from the wreckage by witnesses before the flames reached him. The others were so badly burned that only one had been tentatively identified today.

He was Hugh A. McKellar, Los Angeles, district sales manager for the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company.

Other dead were: Bernie M. Goldsmith, Los Angeles; R. L. Robinson, Yonkers, N. Y.; Albert Cobern, 21, son of Fred Cobern, former president of American Airways, Inc.; Harold J. Kelsey, Los Angeles, pilot; H. H. Campbell, Los Angeles, copilot.

The ship was due at Pernambuco at 11 p. m. Tuesday.

The Graf carried nine German passengers and 100 kilograms of mail.

Return passage has been booked in the name of William B. Leeds, American millionaire.

GRAF ZEPPELIN STARTS TO BRAZIL

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, March 21.—The Graf Zeppelin was en route to Pernambuco, Brazil, today on the first commercial flight of the spring and summer season.

The ship was due at Pernambuco at 11 p. m. Tuesday.

The Graf carried nine German passengers and 100 kilograms of mail.

Return passage has been booked in the name of William B. Leeds, American millionaire.

WILL CHARGE YOUTH WITH MURDER AFTER CONFESSION HEARD

Shoots Sweetheart Six
Times, Then Tries
Suicide

RAVENNA, O., March 21.—Medina County officials said today they were preparing to file murder charges against Ivan Hackenberg, 24-year-old Wadsworth youth, who was recovering in Robinson Memorial Hospital here from self-inflicted bullet wounds. Hackenberg has confessed killing his 43-year-old sweetheart, Mrs. Mary Hair.

Prosecutor David Porter announced at Wadsworth that Hackenberg would be moved to a Medina hospital soon, and that his case would be submitted to the grand jury the first week in May.

Private funeral services for Mrs. Hair, a widow, were to be held today at Hilliard's Chapel in Wadsworth.

Hackenberg told Porter and Medina County Sheriff Lyman Bunting that he shot Mrs. Hair near the Akron-Wadsworth Road last Wednesday night. The first shot was fired, he said, during a scuffle for possession of his pistol. He fired five more shots into the woman's body, he admitted.

Driving for several miles into Portage County, Hackenberg said he then shot himself.

Hospital attendants said that although Hackenberg was recovering, he could not be moved from here for a week.

HUGH MARTIN QUITS AS U. S. ATTORNEY

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Declaring that he wished "to be free from all possibility of restraint," Hugh K. Martin, candidate for the Republican nomination for congressman-at-large, today resigned as assistant United States attorney for the southern district of Ohio, effective April 1.

He will resume the practice of law in Columbus.

"Although I have no income other than what I earn," said Martin, "I have resigned, after more than four years service."

The resignation was tendered to Haveth E. Mau, United States district attorney for Ohio. Martin was appointed assistant United States attorney December 1, 1927. He succeeded William R. Bartels, as chief of the Columbus office about a year ago.

IS MARTYR ONLY FOOLING ?

Dr. Wolter, Accused As "Faker," Refuses To Submit To Second Starvation Test

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Dr. Frederic F. Wolter, who says he is starving himself to death to attract attention to unemployment conditions, walked out of a hospital before a second examination could be made to establish the truth of his claim that he has not eaten for twenty-two days.

Dr. Oscar Hunter of George Washington University Hospital examined Wolter Saturday and pronounced him a "faker." He said tests showed that Wolter had been taking food in minute quantities.

Wolter heatedly disputed this finding and agreed to go to Gallinger Hospital, a public institution for further observation. Less than twenty-four hours after entering Gallinger, he went back to his cubicle in the Salvation Army Hotel. Hospital authorities declined to discuss the case except to say that Wolter had eaten nothing while there.

Wolter, who is 57 years old and holds three university degrees, declared anew that he would starve himself to death unless he was given work suitable to a man of scholarly attainments.

BIJOU THEATER ROBBED; LONE BANDIT HOLDS UP GIRL FOR $35

A bespectacled bandit held up a 17-year-old ticket seller, daughter of the theater owner, in the box office of the Bijou Theater, 19 Green St., and departed with $35 at 9:20 o'clock Sunday night.

The robbery was staged ten minutes before the ticket booth was scheduled to be closed, and shortly after the last show of the evening had commenced.

Miss Katherine Hibbert, daughter of James T. Hibbert, owner of the theater, was alone in the booth when the bandit opened the door, displayed a pistol and announced: "I want your money."

Without waiting for the girl to turn over the money, the robber rifled the cash drawer, taking only bills on the tray, and then searched elsewhere in the booth for more.

After admonishing Miss Hibbert not to give an immediate alarm, the bandit left, toward Market St. Miss Hibbert, afraid the hold-up man might have an accomplice nearby, waited a short time and then called her brother, Lawrence, who notified police.

The robber, Miss Hibbert said, came from the direction of Main St., and before entering the booth, had opened a door leading to the second floor apartment where the Hibbert family resides.

Customary to remove the receipts to the apartment.

ON THE UPGRADE SAYS DOLLAR

SAN FRANCISCO, March 21.—Capt. Robert Dollar, 88-year-old dean of American shipping magnates, celebrated his seventy-seventh year in business today by arriving early for work in a fighting mood.

A fighter all his life, Capt. Dollar has found his greatest joy in battling depression. In his turbulent career he has passed through six or seven, and he believes the present one is about to lose its grip on the world.

"I can generally tell when they've run their course," the white-haired veteran of world-wide transportation said. "We are on the upgrade and good time is ahead of us now. Hard work is the answer."

The only reason Capt. Dollar knocked off work for his 88th birthday yesterday was because it was Sunday. Any other birthday would have found him at his desk, from where he takes an active part in directing the fleet of ships whose dollar-marked funnels are known in every far-flung port.

Collings took off from Port Columbus, accompanied by two other airplanes, to search for the unreported transport.

The pilot was Hal George. He carried Mrs. Carol Cole, passenger, flying from St. Louis to New York.

The plane was a single motor, low-winged Northrup, marked as No. 966-Y. At 2:37 a. m. George asked by radio for weather at Pittsburgh. He was belated near Steubenville then. He gave no hint of trouble.

ST. LOUIS, March 21.—Mrs. Carol S. Cole, a St. Louis woman, phoned en route to New York where her daughter lies injured in a hospital, was the only passenger on the Transcontinental-Western air express transport plane overdue east of Columbus, officials of the air line here said.

FAVORS REPEAL
YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 21.—A stand in favor of repeal of the eighteenth amendment, letting states decide their own liquor policy, was taken today by W. R. Kilpatrick, Warren, candidate, for congress in this district.

WANT MIRACLES
CINCINNATI, O., March 21.—University of Cincinnati co-eds prefer a man with intelligence, polish, height and jack of conceit. He need not be handsome. Further, he must be a good sport, a good dancer, tolerant, and possessing a sense of humor.

GROUP FORCED BACK BY ARMED PICKETS; TROOPS HELD READY

Violence Breaks Out In
Mining Section;
Mines Closed

ATHENS, O., March 21.—An automobile containing four Ohio National Guard officers was stoned today by strikers when the officers attempted to reach the Millfield mine No. 6 of the Sunday Creek Coal Co., to relieve guardsmen who were on duty all night.

Lt. Col. L. P. Wolford, Cleveland, reported the stoning to Sheriff Wayne Wingett, here.

The windshield and headlights of the officers' car were broken. They were forced to turn back to their headquarters at Nelsonville. Nineteen National Guard observers are in the area for the state.

Following disorders Saturday night and a mass meeting Sunday, attended by about 4,000 of the 7,000 striking coal miners, Governor White announced state troops would be held in readiness for quick mobilization if needed.

The strikers and pickets were armed with rifles and shotguns, according to the officers attacked today. Col. Wolford said there were about 1,200 of the protesting men. They had blocked the road to No. 6.

Two county deputies were reported at number 6 mine, unable to get through the picket lines to return here.

Reports that Number 6 and the Lick Run Mine of the Athens and Hocking Coal Co., would open today were blamed for the uprisings, which started Saturday night with stoning of mine officials' automobiles, the dynamiting of a spur track trestle and the beating of Andy Chute, Sunday Creek assistant mine foreman.

Adjutant-General Frank Henderson advised the operators not to attempt to open their shafts. They posted notices that operations would not be resumed. Quiet was restored until today's attack on the guard officers' car.

The miners struck February 1, rejecting a reduced wage scale and demanding recognition of United Mine Workers of America.

In announcing his decision to maintain order among striking coal miners, Governor White declared his intention to protect the strikers, those working in the mines, and property rights.

"Those striking have the right to strike and picket," the governor said, "and I shall protect them in the exercise of all their rights. But they do not have the right to assault or shoot at persons desiring to work, or to destroy property."

"Those who wish to work and make a living for their families also have the right to do so and I shall afford them the protection which is their due."

"It is with extreme regret that I observe the growth of violence in connection with this strike, the use of intimidation and terrorism and wholesale violation of laws. This violence, this disgraceful lawlessness, can no longer be tolerated. It will be put down by force of arms if necessary, and those found guilty will be summarily punished."

"I am warning the lawless element of this district to refrain from future violations of the law. I am ordering units of the National Guard to be prepared to move to this district immediately in the event that further contempt of the law is shown, or the continuance of acts which threaten the loss of life and property."

Half a dozen units of state troops in central and southern Ohio were prepared to move into the mining districts on short notice.

SCRANTON, Pa., March 21.—Scranton police arrested ninety-one pickets, including two women, today for interfering with miners who went to work at collieries despite the insurgent strike which is now in its second week.

The two women had stones in their pockets, police said. The men arrested were held on charges of disorderly conduct.

SHENANDOAH, Pa., March 21.—Insurgent mine strikers of the Pennsylvania anthracite area today concentrated on the Locust Summit Colliery, the world's largest coal breaker, determined to force its suspension.

The strikers believed that closing the operation, a Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Co. producing unit, would break down the resistance to their "outlaw strike" in the Schuylkill-Northumberland area, District No. 9 of the United Mine Workers of America.

The strike was based on wage reductions and working hours.

IS MARTYR ONLY FOOLING?

Dr. Wolter, Accused As "Faker," Refuses To Submit To Second Starvation Test

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Dr. Frederic F. Wolter, who says he is starving himself to death to attract attention to unemployment conditions, walked out of a hospital before a second examination could be made to establish the truth of his claim that he has not eaten for twenty-two days.

Dr. Oscar Hunter of George Washington University Hospital examined Wolter Saturday and pronounced him a "faker." He said tests showed that Wolter had been taking food in minute quantities.

Wolter heatedly disputed this finding and agreed to go to Galinger Hospital, a public institution for further observation. Less than twenty-four hours after entering Galinger, he went back to his cubicle in the Salvation Army Hotel. Hospital authorities declined to discuss the case except to say that Wolter had eaten nothing while there.

Wolter, who is 67 years old and holds three university degrees, declared anew that he would starve himself to death unless he was given work suitable to a man of scholarly attainments.

BIJOU THEATER ROBBED; LONE BANDIT HOLDS UP GIRL FOR $35

A bespectacled bandit held up a 17-year-old ticket seller, daughter of the theater owner, in the box office of the Bijou Theater, 19 Green St., and departed with $35 at 9:30 o'clock Sunday night.

The robbery was staged ten minutes before the ticket booth was scheduled to be closed, and shortly after the last show of the evening had commenced.

Miss Katherine Hibbert, daughter of James T. Hibbert, owner of the theater, was alone in the booth when the bandit opened the door, displayed a pistol and announced: "I want your money."

Without waiting for the girl to turn over the money, the robber rifled the cash drawer, taking only bills on the tray, and then searched elsewhere in the booth for more.

After admonishing Miss Hibbert not to give an immediate alarm, the bandit left, toward Market St. Miss Hibbert, afraid the hold-up man might have an accomplice nearby, waited a short time and then called her brother, Lawrence, who notified police.

The robber, Miss Hibbert said, came from the direction of Main St., and before entering the booth, had opened a door leading to the

ON THE UPGRADE SAYS DOLLAR

SAN FRANCISCO, March 21.—Capt. Robert Dollar, 88-year-old dean of American shipping magnates, celebrated his seventy-seventh year in business today by arriving early for work in a fighting mood.

A fighter all his life, Capt. Dollar has found his greatest joy in battling depression. In his turbulent career he has passed through six or seven, and he believes the present one is about to lose its grip on the world.

"I can generally tell when they're on their course," the white-haired veteran of world-wide transportation said. "We are on the upgrade and good time are heading our way. Hard work is the answer."

The only reason Capt. Dollar knocked off work for his 88th birthday yesterday was because it was Sunday. Any other birthday would have found him at his desk, from where he takes an active part in directing the fleet of ships whose dollar-marked funnels are known in every far-flung port.

WANT MIRACLES

CINCINNATI, O., March 21.—University of Cincinnati co-eds prefer a man with intelligence, polish, height and lack of conceit. He need not be handsome. Further, he must be a good sport, a good dancer, tolerant and possessing a sense of humor.

These intimate facts about what every co-ed desires in a male companion were disclosed in a survey by the University of Cincinnati campus newspaper.

The qualities demanded by Cincinnati students, it was learned by the survey, are that a girl be frank, a good sport, have poise and a sense of humor, beauty and a smile. Then, too, some men admire the girl who doesn't "tell all she knows."

GROUP FORCED BACK BY ARMED PICKETS; TROOPS HELD READY

Violence Breaks Out In
Mining Section;
Mines Closed

ATHENS, O., March 21.—An automobile containing four Ohio National Guard officers was stoned today by strikers when the officers attempted to reach the Millfield mine No. 6 of the Sunday Creek Coal Co., to relieve guardsmen who were on duty all night.

Lt. Col. L. P. Wolford, Cleveland, reported the stoning to Sheriff Wayne Wingett, here.

The windshield and headlights of the officers' car were broken. They were forced to turn back to their headquarters at Nelsonville. Nineteen National Guard observers are in the area for the state.

Following disorders Saturday night and a mass meeting Sunday, attended by about 4,000 of the 7,000 striking coal miners, Governor White announced state troops would be held in readiness for quick mobilization if needed.

The strikers and pickets were armed with rifles and shotguns, according to the officers attacked today. Col. Wolford said there were about 1,200 of the protesting men. They had blocked the road to No. 6.

Two county deputies were reported at number 6 mine, unable to get through the picket lines to return here.

Reports that Number 6 and the Lick Run Mine of the Athens and Hocking Coal Co., would open today were blamed for the uprisings, which started Saturday night with stoning of mine officials' automobiles, the dynamiting of a spur track trestle and the beating of Andy Chute, Sunday Creek assistant mine foreman.

Adjutant-General Frank Henderson advised the operators not to attempt to open their shafts. They posted notices that operations would not be resumed. Quiet was restored until today's attack on the guard officers' car.

The miners struck February 1, rejecting a reduced wage scale and demanding recognition of United Mine Workers of America.

In announcing his decision to maintain order among striking coal miners, Governor White declared his intention to protect the strikers, those working in the mines, and property rights.

"These striking have the right to strike and picket," the governor said, "and I shall protect them in the exercise of all their rights. But they do not have the right to assault or shoot at persons desiring to work, or to destroy property."

"Those who wish to work and make a living for their families also have the right to do so and I shall afford them the protection which is their due."

"It is with extreme regret that I observe the growth of violence in connection with this strike, the use of intimidation and terrorism and wholesale violation of laws. This violence, this disgraceful lawlessness, can no longer be tolerated. It will be put down by force of arms if necessary and those found guilty will be summarily punished."

"I am warning the lawless element of this district to refrain from future violations of the law. I am ordering units of the National Guard to be prepared to move to this district immediately in the event that further contempt of the law is shown, or the continuance of acts which threaten the loss of life and property."

Half a dozen units of state troops in central and southern Ohio were prepared to move into the mining districts on short notice.

LIFE TERMER GOES HOME TO SEE FOLKS

ST. LOUIS, March 21.—Mrs. Carol S. Cole, a St. Louis woman physician enroute to New York where her daughter lies injured in a hospital, was the only passenger on the Transcontinental-Western air express transport plane overdue east of Columbus, officials of the air line here said.

WITHDRAW SHIPS

WASHINGTON, March 21.—With the Shanghai situation quieted, the navy department has ordered fourteen warships withdrawn from the Asiatic fleet. The destroyers will sail from Manila April 18 to go in reserve at Mare Island, Calif.

The submarines, sailing from Manila May 2, will be placed in reserve at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

PUBLIC SALES

Wed. Mar. 22—Fred Flynn

You are invited to attend the

Spring Opening

Wednesday Evening March 23rd

Xenia stores are now full of the latest styles from the fashion centers of the world. You will be delighted with the dash and snap found in these late arrivals. If you haven't seen them you have missed something. Perhaps you have been waiting for Easter. -----

If you have, you are invited to view all this on Wednesday evening March 23rd. Plan to attend this gala event, you won't be disappointed. Bring the family or a friend and make a night of it. Make your selections and be ready for Easter and Spring. -----

Purchases May Be Made

Contrary to custom we are not only holding open house — you may make purchases. Many people don't have the time to shop during week days and it is to overcome this difficulty that this change is made.

Buy Wednesday evening and avoid that "getting-ready-for Easter" rush. You will be more satisfied and can make your week end plans in advance. The stores will have complete forces — you are sure to be properly cared for. -----

Prizes For Visitors and Shoppers

The plan of giving prizes to Spring Opening visitors will be continued this year. Progressive merchants are each giving three merchandise prizes. Look for and trade in those stores. You will be able to identify them by the "Spring Opening" placards.

This year in addition to giving prize coupons to visitors only — extra coupons will be given with cash purchases or payments on account. This is an added reason for shopping Wednesday evening. Get ready folks, be on hand. Watch the advertisements in Tuesday's Gazette for specials.

CARMA HOSTETLER HAS HIGHEST GRADE IN SCHOOL CONTEST

Miss Carma Hostetler, Cedarville High School student, one of three Greene County seniors who recently won a free trip to Washington, D. C., in a temperance quiz book test, received the highest grade among thirty-seven seniors of Greene County schools who were enrolled in the annual senior scholarship test Saturday.

The examination was conducted at Bryan High School in Yellow Springs and the four-hour test covered the subjects of mathematics, English, history, science and social science.

The ten highest ranking contestants are eligible to compete in a district contest soon to be held. There will be county, district and state awards.

Nearly 150 four-year scholarships in various Ohio colleges and universities will be granted in the state-wide examination and seniors who took the county test were asked to indicate their choice of schools in case they won scholarships.

Miss Hostetler, who obtained 27½ out of a possible 400 points, had a half-point margin over Elaine Knoop, Spring Valley, who ranked second. Walter Linton, of Jefferson High School, was third with 254 points.

The other seven high-point students, ranking in the order in which they finished in the examination, are: Perry Fletcher, Ross High; John B. Tobias, Cedarville; Julia McCallister, Cedarville; Geo. Yeazell, Yellow Springs; Rex Black, Bellbrook; Robert Glass, Jamestown; Violet McCollough, Jamestown.

AUTO STOLEN FROM GARAGE; ANOTHER AUTO IS RECOVERED

Russell Caplinger, 105 Chestnut St., reported to police Sunday morning that his Chevrolet sedan, bearing license number D25,113, had been stolen Saturday night from his garage by a thief who broke a padlock on the garage door.

Police linked the theft with a reported attempt to steal an auto from the garage of Earl Rakestraw, 27 Maple St., earlier the same evening.

An effort is being made by police Monday to identify the owner of a model A 1928 Ford coupe, found by officers at 3:30 a. m. Monday near the McDowell and Torrence Lumber Co., S. Detroit St. The car bore license number 761,302, believed to have been issued at New Vienna, O.

Police also received a report of an attempted robbery at 518 E. Church St., Saturday night. The house at this address was unoccupied but a check indicated nothing of value had been stolen. There was evidence the residence had been entered and searched.

WEE DAUGHTER GOES FEMININE TO MATCH MOTHER

Courtesy Good Housekeeping

It's just as important for the wee daughter to have a bow in her hair and ruffles on her tiny frocks, as for mother to look sweetly feminine in this year of 1932. The little frocks pictured are easily made at home and dainty hand touches of embroidery or stitchery make them delightful. The one at the left, above, has scalloped trimming; so does the one second from the right, below. The second from left at the top has a fagoted yoke and edging to the cuff. The third figure wears a frock of linen or dimity with pleats and ruffled collar, the fourth is trimmed with Russian embroidery. The one at the extreme right is a party frock, if you please, and may be made of dotted swiss or crepe de chine. Below, left, the cunning play frock is made of printed lawn; the second has a smocked yoke, the third is done in the French manner in pink handkerchief linen with blue collar, shoulder bows and fagoted scallops. The little figure, right, is wearing yellow linen rompers.

STEWART WRITES OF WASHINGTON IN BRIGHT AND ILLUMINATING FASHION

THE MOST pungent dispatches out of Washington today are those sent by Charles P. Stewart. Written in a breezy individual style, these dispatches quickly put the reader at the nub of matters—simplify the cumbersome processes of government and make clear that which seems incomprehensible.

In addition to his dispatches, Charles P. Stewart writes "Who's Who in Washington." These salty, snappy little writeups illuminate all the important characters on the national stage.

Mr. Stewart's clarifying articles on politics and governmental affairs appear daily on the editorial page of The Gazette. His "Who's Who in Washington" feature also appears in this paper regularly.

Farm Notes

ESTIMATING A FAIR PRICE FOR SILAGE

Partly because of its perishable character when removed from the silo and partly because of its relatively great weight and its wet condition, very little silage is bought or sold. Consequently, it does not have, like hay and grain, a well established market price. When the operation or ownership of a farm changes, the question of the value of any silage on hand often arises.

A price for silage may be arrived at by comparing the feeding value of silage with that of other feeds with a definite market value. According to A. E. Perkins, Associate in Dairying at the Ohio Experiment Station, silage contains approximately one-third as much nutrients as good mixed hay and has about one-third the feeding value of the hay, depending upon how much grain is present. From data collected at Wooster over a period of five years, it has been found that a ton of silage contains approximately the same amount of nutrients found in seven bushels of corn or in four and one-half bushels of dry shelled corn and 600 pounds of corn stover of medium moisture content.

Based upon these facts, the price of a ton of silage may be arrived at in one of the three following ways:

1. Take one-third of the farm price per ton of good timothy or mixed hay.
2. Figure the value, at the farm, of 7 bushels of shelled corn.
3. Take 30 per cent of the local ton-price of good stover and add to this the value of four and one-half bushels of corn.

If the values obtained by these three methods differ greatly add them together and divide by three.

AUTOS COLLIDE

Minor damage to both cars resulted but neither was hurt when a coach driven by Carl Bloom, 27 W. Second St., and a roadster operated by O. E. Stricklen, R. R. No. 2, Xenia, collided at Main and Whiteman Sts. Saturday night at 9:25 o'clock, police were told. The damage included a bent front fender on the coach and bent front spring and steering rod on the roadster.

CARMA HOSTETLER HAS HIGHEST GRADE IN SCHOOL CONTEST

Miss Carma Hostetler, Cedarville High School student, one of three Greene County seniors who recently won a free trip to Washington, D. C., in a temperance quiz book test, received the highest grade among thirty-seven seniors of Greene County schools who were enrolled in the annual senior scholarship test Saturday.

The examination was conducted at the High School in Yellow Springs and the four-hour test covered the subjects of mathematics, English, history, science and social science.

The ten highest ranking contestants are eligible to compete in a district contest soon to be held. There will be county, district and state awards.

Nearly 150 four-year scholars in various Ohio colleges and universities will be granted in state-wide examination and seniors are asked to indicate their choice of schools in case they won scholarships.

Miss Hostetler, who obtained 275 1/2 out of a possible 400 points, had a half-point margin over Elaine Knoop, Spring Valley, who ranked second. Walter Linton, of Jefferson High School, was third with 264 points.

The other seven high-point students, ranking in the order in which they finished in the examination, are: Perry Fletcher, Ross High; John B. Tobias, Cedarville; Julia McCallister, Cedarville; Geo. Yeazell, Yellow Springs; Rex Black, Bellbrook; Robert Glass, Jamestown; Violet McCollough, Jamestown.

AUTO STOLEN FROM GARAGE; ANOTHER AUTO IS RECOVERED

Russell Caplinger, 105 Chestnut St., reported to police Sunday morning that his Chevrolet sedan, bearing license number D25,118, had been stolen Saturday night from his garage by a thief who broke a padlock on the garage door.

Police linked the theft with a reported attempt to steal an auto from the garage of Earl Rakestraw, 27 Maple St., earlier the same evening.

An effort is being made by police Monday to identify the owner of a model A 1928 Ford coupe, found by officers at 3:30 a. m. Monday near the McDowell and Torrence Lumber Co., S. Detroit St. The car bore license number 781,302, believed to have been issued at New Vienna, O.

Police also received a report of an attempted robbery at 518 E. Church St., Saturday night. The house at this address was unoccupied but a check indicated nothing of value had been stolen. There was evidence the residence had been entered and searched.

WEE DAUGHTER GOES FEMININE TO MATCH MOTHER

It's just as important for the wee daughter to have a bow in her hair and ruffles on her tiny frocks, as for mother to look sweetly feminine in this year of 1932. The little frocks pictured are easily made at home and dainty hand touches of embroidery or stitchery make them delightful. The one at the left, above, has scalloped

trimming, so does the one second from the right, below. The second from left at the top has a fagoted yoke and edging to the cuff. The third figure wears a frock of linen or dimity with pleats and ruffled collar, the fourth is trimmed with Russian embroidery. The one at the extreme right is a party frock, if you please, and may be made of dotted swiss or crepe de chine. Below, left, the cunning play frock is made of printed lawn, the second has a smocked yoke, the third is done in the French manner in pink handkerchief linen with blue collar, shoulder bows and fagoted scallops. The little figure, right, is wearing yellow linen rompers.

STEWART WRITES OF WASHINGTON IN BRIGHT AND ILLUMINATING FASHION

THE MOST pungent dispatches out of Washington today are those sent by Charles P. Stewart. Written in a breezy individual style, these dispatches quickly put the reader at the nub of matters—simplify the cumbersome processes of government and make clear that which seems incomprehensible.

In addition to his dispatches, Charles P. Stewart writes "Who's Who in Washington." These salty, snappy little writeups illuminate all the important characters on the national stage.

Mr. Stewart's clarifying articles on politics and government affairs appear daily on the editorial page of The Gazette. His "Who's Who in Washington" feature also appears in this paper regularly.

ESTIMATING A FAIR PRICE FOR SILAGE

Partly because of its perishable character when removed from the silo and partly because of its relatively great weight and its wet condition, very little silage is bought or sold. Consequently, it does not have, like hay and grain, a well established market price. When the operation or ownership of a farm changes, the question of the value of any silage on hand often arises.

A price for silage may be arrived at by comparing the feeding value of silage with that of other feeds with a definite market value. According to A. E. Perkins, Associate in Dairying at the Ohio Experiment Station, silage contains approximately one-third as much nutrients as good mixed hay and has about one-third the feeding value of the hay, depending upon how much grain is present. From data collected at Wooster over a period of five years, it has been found that a ton of silage contains approximately the same amount of nutrients found in seven bushels of corn or in four and one-half bushels of dry shelled corn and 600 pounds of corn stover of medium moisture content.

Based upon these facts, the price of a ton of silage may be arrived at in one of the three following ways:

1. Take one-third of the farm price per ton of good timothy or mixed hay.

2. Figure the value, at the farm, of 7 bushels of shelled corn.

3. Take 30 per cent of the local ton-price of good stover and add to this the value of four and one-half bushels of corn.

If the values obtained by these three methods differ greatly add them together and divide by three.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water: therefore leave off contention, before it be meddled with.—Proverbs, xvii 14.

RATHER QUIET NOW

Asked regarding the situation at Shanghai, Secretary Stimson replied: "Over there all is as peaceful as a young mother on a May evening." That is, comparatively speaking, true. The fighting has stopped. The wrangling is about to begin. The League of Nations' investigating commission has arrived. The United States has a representative on that commission.

A few thousand lives lost in the fighting around Shanghai is a few thousand lives to a people numbered in the hundreds of millions. The outcome of the diplomatic battle about to begin in Shanghai is likely to affect the lives of millions yet unborn. Cosmically the latter battle is the more important of the two. The issue of it will work for peace or more wars in the Orient. Sharing with China and Japan the Pacific Ocean, Americans are vitally interested in the adjustments that will emerge from the negotiations now being initiated in Shanghai. Will they read the diplomatic communiqués as avidly as they did the military communiqués of a few days ago?

The question of extraterritoriality is bound to come up in connection with any discussion of the future relations of other powers with China. The United States enjoys extraterritorial rights in China, as do Great Britain, Japan, France, Italy and several other countries. All of the treaty powers would be glad to be rid of a system that is burdensome to them and irritating to the Chinese. At the same time they are fearful of the consequences of suddenly abrogating extraterritoriality and exposing the vast interests of their nationals in China, which have been built up on extraterritoriality, to the uncertainty of Chinese justice and the rapacity of Chinese warlords.

A heavy responsibility rests upon the treaty powers to see that justice is done China, without playing into the hands of its domestic exploiters. China cannot be dealt with as Great Britain, Germany or France or other well organized countries can be. Civilization in China is only skin deep. Westernization stops short a few miles out of the treaty ports. There has been no responsible government in China since the Manchus were ousted 20 years ago. The 400,000,000 or more people in China are a conglomeration of different races and tribes, with varying degrees of development from the highest to the lowest. They are incompetent to govern themselves in accordance with Western standards.

Admitting all that, China and the Chinese are entitled to as square a deal as circumstances will permit to be given them. Only it is well for Americans to remember, when they urge their Government to do this or that in China, that Occidental formulas do not run in that spacious and loosely jointed country. Sentimentality should have no place in the Shanghai negotiations. The Chinese are looking out for themselves. So are the Japanese. Americans should do no less.

PLAN OF DE VALERA

In outlining the objectives of his administration, Eamon de Valera, new president of the Irish Free State, includes a plan for a "merger" of Northern and Southern Ireland. He insists that the present condition of separatism cannot continue to exist, if only because it is uneconomical, arguing that the island now is obliged to support two sets of officials, including two prime ministers, and that there is "great inconvenience of the customs." "So," he concludes, "we must have a united Ireland."

In taking this position, de Valera reopens an ancient and highly disputatious question which his predecessors in office at Dublin have been content to let drowse.

Readers will recollect that one of the principal Nineteenth Century and early Twentieth Century obstacles in the way of settlement of the Irish controversy was the "Ulster question." Ulster, for reasons which seemed good to its people and its leaders, insisted upon snuggling up close to England. As they viewed the matter, they needed the protection of that Country against the remainder of Erin whose plans they distrusted. That is the reason Ireland is not "united" today.

Whether the old distrust has been dissipated and North Ireland has acquired a new feeling of kinship with, and confidence in, South Ireland, is a point that, perhaps, can be settled only through some sort of definite test. But on the face of things, de Valera seems to have a heavy job of persuasion ahead of him, in case he goes about seriously to "sell" his program for unity to the Ulstermen, particularly as it is not many years since he was arrested while trying to pass the Ulster frontier in order to pay that Country a visit.

THE WAR MIND

War is largely a state of mind. We will have war as long as we think in terms of war. The proverb "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he" may be applied to nations as well. The Earl of Oxford and Asquith was Prime Minister of England when the World War began. In his "Memories and Reflections," we find this statement: "Unless we can eliminate war, it will be the death of civilization and all that makes life individual life, communal life, international life—worth living. There can be no effective safeguard of the most treasured possessions and promises of our race until we have wiped international warfare off the slate of possibility. That is no Utopian ideal. As difficult, if you like, as unimaginable things have been done. Slavery, private war, dueling were all regarded in their day as natural and even necessary institutions. Why and how have they disappeared? Not by repression, not by coercion, but through the operation of moral force which sapped their vitality, which discredited their authority, and which brought them, in due time, one and all their message of doom. So it will be when, by the same agencies, the curse of war becomes, as it will become, a memory of the past. The church can help to put into operation moral forces which will sap the vitality of the war spirit and discredit its authority."

IMPORTATION BAN

Secretary Mills states that the United States Government is without legislative authority to impose a general ban on the importation of products from Soviet Russia.

Congress will not be wise to give the Government that authority and demand that it exercise it. A general ban on imports from Sovietdom would be a boycott, as complete and vicious as some misguided citizens are now proposing that we shall initiate against Japanese trade.

We are not concerned with the condition of labor in Soviet Russia. We are concerned only with protecting American labor from competition in the American market by products of cheaper labor abroad. That is a matter for the tariff to deal with. General bans against particular countries are invidious and therefore to be avoided.

Saw a journalistic mug off to Europe the other night.... He was going on the installment plan, $35 down and the rest when they can catch you.... He had $100 in his jeans and I told him I was moving and leaving no address to avoid the cable for cash to get him out of France, or out of a French jail.... The only thing you can't get now on time is married or maybe rich or maybe you can, at that.... I know a couple who paid off the minister in ten $1 installments....

New York is full of everybody at this time of year.... The sun-tanners are trickling back from this and that coral strand, to get their luggage together for the trek to the Riviera and later to Maine and Canada.... To French Lick, Aiken, Hot Springs and so on.... Lucky devil!.... Oh, I know one of those devils!.... Oh, I don't know, really; did you ever know one of those temperature nomads who wasn't a nervous wreck from the sheer enormity?... I was in Aiken, S. C., once, for a brief sojourn and discovered that the fashionable had to drive 15 miles to the nearest movie, in another state!....

Several friends I know, fed up with apartment life, are planning to build in a suburb.... None will be satisfied with an ordinary dwelling as we know the thing.... One pair will erect a shack of glass, chromium and concrete, with a circular living room and a second-story garage.... Another will place the kitchen on the roof, to avoid rising aromas and heat.... A third plans transparent walls for all bedrooms, with special glass to let the sun rays in.... The crop of modernistic houses will be astoundingly large, I am told, during the coming seasons....

EXTENDING THE CUFF—

Goodness, gracious, me!... Charles Bickford, that great big he-man of the talkies, has opened a lingerie shop in Hollywood.... To complete the paradox, Buddy Rogers ought to go in with Bing Crosby and open an iron foundry on Broadway.... There is nothing duller than a party thrown by the "sophisticates" of this burg—whereat everyone is expected to do the currently fashionable thing.... I had to drop in briefly on one of those starch-and-sapphirum soirees the other night and found the crowd playing chess instead of backgammon or contract bridge.... The old-fashioned marathon pastime of pawns and castles appears to be coming back everywhere now, and I look for a revival of the old-time chess features in daily papers....

It still seems to me that a man looks foolish in tails.... Yet full-dress is now replacing the erstwhile monkey-suit, not only for holier-than-thou theater parties and the opera, but also for dinner.... I'll crawl into my first minister pajamas and top hat when someone will pay me enough for the laugh it affords.... The "white tie" boys, as they refer to themselves, always appear on the point of sailing off into the empyrean blue through mere excess of swank....

SECOND SECTION—

And, hoot if you like, but the latest affectation on the menus of the professional up-to-the-minute is—crocodile roast!.... The dish, claim those with harder courage than my own, is a great delicacy, and resembles a cross between fillet of sole and chicken.... The truth is, that it used to be a specialty of the Beaux Arts Cafe, in West 40th street, where it was served at the famous Lusitania sailing party of Alfred Vanderbilt.... They will get it for you there now, but only on order from the Florida crocodile farms.... The cost is about $2.50 per pound.... Um, yum!....

The chief product of Siam is rice, the national food. It is heavily exported.

Spain leads as a producer of olives.

Syria has an area of 60,000 square miles.

PARADISE LOST—1932

SENATOR FROM OKLAHOMA HOLDS BUT LITTLE FAITH IN "MAGIC OF POLITICS"

WASHINGTON—Except for an occasional brief, pithy remark, Senator Thomas P. Gore simply has sat and listened to his brother lawmakers thus far since congress met.

CHAS. P. STEWART

The blind Oklahoma man talk when he chooses to do so. No congressional debater in recent years has surpassed the reputation he established during his senatorial decade and a half, from the "sooner" state's admission until his fellow Democrats punished his belligerent opposition to President Wilson's post-war policies by refusing him a renomination. In 1930 they decided to forgive him. He had been a mighty champion of the farmers. Maybe they concluded that they needed him again.

The first thing Senator Gore did after his election was to take a special course at the Oklahoma agricultural college. Then he started on a tour of the farm belt. Most legislators are satisfied to understand their own respective "special problems." The blind senator traveled from the Gulf of Mexico to Winnipeg, with side trips totaling nearly 12,000 miles.

Finally he arrived in Washington, saying he felt reasonably competent to discuss the farm question in all its aspects.

However, congress convened with its mind occupied with other work, to which it seemed inclined to give the precedence over agriculture's troubles.

The farmers are clamorous enough, but they lack organization to push their desires with the energy shown by big business in its various forms—notably banking and urban industry.

Anyway, they have had to wait, pending legislative action on such matters as the creation of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, the broadening of Federal Reserve credit facilities and a decision upon as painless a method as possible to meet the federal budget's present deficit of a billion or so per annum.

In the meantime the highly-agricultural Senator Gore simply has sat and listened, with no air of impatience whatever.

From a chat I had with him shortly before the session opened, my impression is that this philosophic calm is due mainly to the senator's firm conviction that nothing congress possibly can do will make much difference.

"As one of the country's political magicians," he told me, "I have small faith in the magic we practice."

"America and the rest of the world are paying for the war."

"In four years it consumed, directly and indirectly, approximately the equivalent of all the accumulated wealth of the United States. Naturally the entire world is correspondingly poorer and suffers in consequence."

"Trying to restore that wealth by act of congress or parliament or diet is like trying to legislate back the legs and arms of men crippled in battle."

"For urban folk as well as rural," continued the Oklahoman, "relief from the depression will come through the healing processes of time, and through no more swiftly-working treatment—though government can remove some of the evils which retard recovery."

"For example, one step in the direction of better conditions clearly lies in the direction of tariff reduction, to permit exchanges of our goods for the goods of other peoples, and for the benefit of agriculture, to which, as an exporting industry (if it can find foreign markets), tariff protection is counterfeited money."

"Even tariff adjustment will be difficult, because other nations have been driven to retaliate against us. Every country is trying to make itself self-sufficient, including seven new ones of war creation. England itself, the cradle of free trade, has come to protection."

"It is possible," concluded the senator, "to say only this with certainty: When prices have reached their lowest and have remained at that level long enough to convince practically everyone that they assuredly will not sink lower, there will begin to be a resumption of normal buying."

"Therefore, training in budgeting of the children will assure their education not only through the elementary schools, but on through high school and college as well. The planning is much more easily accomplished when the child is young, because then there is more time in which to accomplish the desired result, and the inroads on the monthly income or salary check will not be so large."

This early schooling establishes in the child a correct sense of values, good buying ability and thrift habits.

Good, Bad Features Of Diet

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The Hollywood diet, which had such a vogue among reducers a few years ago, was analyzed in this column yesterday.

On the average, the Hollywood dieter gets 1,050 calories a day and about 40 grams of protein. This is half an ordinary person's nutritional needs, and decidedly under the total daily protein requirements. But since the diet continues only for 18 days, no harm is likely to be done by this. The diet should reduce a person rapidly and is a good enough example of a rapid reduction cure.

One prominent advantage that it has is psychological. It tells the reducer exactly what to eat every meal and since he knows it is going to last just 18 days, the regimen probably will be followed out. It is easier to do a definite stint like that than to go on a vague reducing diet for an indefinite time.

The length of time the Hollywood diet lasts is in accord with the most modern views of reduction systems. Many people tell me that they have been on a diet a week and at the end of that time actually weigh the same as when they began. That observation is true, and has been found to be due to water retention in the body during the first few days of a reduction diet. You do not begin to see the good effects of a diet until after two weeks. So for that reason the length of time the Hollywood diet lasts is just right.

Aside from its monotony—one needs only to point to 47 half grapefruits in 54 meals to prove the sameness of the Hollywood diet—its worst fault is that it does not record the amount of its servings. "A few calories of salad dressing" might mean 50 calories or 200—salad dressings are all rich. "A large T-bone steak" might be 150 or 300 calories.

And the amount of food you eat is the most important part of a reducing diet. Not what, but how much, you eat. The rule that has been given in this column several times:

"Eat only two-thirds of any helping that is given you" is still the best easy reduction rule for the middle-aged overweight.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
G. B.: "Are there any canned fruits suitable for diabetics?"

Answer: Yes. Several firms market canned fruits preserved with saccharin instead of sugar. No sugar is added to the fruits. Saccharin is sweet without having any caloric value or sugar content. Peaches, pears, apricots, tomatoes, asparagus, spinach and tomato juice are canned in this way. In general, the fruits contain about 1-2 per cent of carbohydrate, preserved by this method. I have tasted them myself and know they are palatable and can hardly be distinguished from fruits preserved in the ordinary way.

Loves Married Man

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Miss Lee: I am very much in love with a married man. I am also married."

"We are both unhappy at home. We have no children. His wife is always nagging him and he says he is tired of it."

"He loves me very much and wants me to go away with him. We are only happy when we are together. He says he will do anything to make me happy. My husband doesn't care for me the way he does. He is very cold to me and in company he keeps knocking me, and hasn't a good word for me at any time. He never brings me anything, not even on a holiday."

"What can I do to make him love me? Or should I go away with the one I love so we two can be happy?"

"Undecided."

Maybe if you devoted yourself to your husband instead of letting this other man make love to you, it might help in winning his love over again. Have you thought of that?

It would be a bit difficult for a husband to be very enthusiastic over a wife who admittedly cares for some one else.

And maybe if your boy friend made love to his wife instead of to you it might help do away with that little habit of nagging his wife seems to have contracted.

The faults you complain of in your husband seem very trivial to me in view of your disloyalty. If you really cannot get along with him, better divorce him before you run off with this other man and persuade your friend to do the same for his wife. Then you two marry and I'll be interested to know just how long your love for one another will last. If you run off together before you are free to marry you will surely not be happy as you would not be accepted in society and you would have no friends.

"Dear Virginia Lee: My family and friends have always told me that I have a marvelous voice and that I ought to sing in public. Do you have to be a pupil of a vocal teacher in order to sing over the radio and on the stage? Rosella."

You have to have some training to sing on the stage or over the radio, Rosella. And I advise you to have your voice tried out by a professional teacher before you believe all your family and friends say. Their opinion is not always to be relied upon.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am only 19 and married to someone I don't love. My husband is very good to me but he has a temper and is very jealous. He does not want me to go to dances. When I go somewhere by myself he says I'm gone to look for someone else and don't care for him."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water: therefore leave off contention, before it be meddled with.—Proverbs, xvii 14.

RATHER QUIET NOW

Asked regarding the situation at Shanghai, Secretary Stimson replied: "Over there all is as peaceful as a young mother on a May evening." That is, comparatively speaking, true. The fighting has stopped. The wrangling is about to begin. The League of Nations' investigating commission has arrived. The United States has a representative on that commission.

A few thousand lives lost in the fighting around Shanghai is a few thousand lives to a people numbered in the hundreds of millions. The outcome of the diplomatic battle about to begin in Shanghai is likely to affect the lives of millions yet unborn. Cosmically the latter battle is the more important of the two. The issue of it will work for peace or more wars in the Orient. Sharing with China and Japan the Pacific Ocean, Americans are vitally interested in the adjustments that will emerge from the negotiations now being initiated in Shanghai. Will they read the diplomatic communiqués as avidly as they did the military communiqués of a few days ago?

The question of extraterritoriality is bound to come up in connection with any discussion of the future relations of other powers with China. The United States enjoys extraterritorial rights in China, as do Great Britain, Japan, France, Italy and several other countries. All of the treaty powers would be glad to be rid of a system that is burdensome to them and irritating to the Chinese. At the same time they are fearful of the consequences of suddenly abrogating extraterritoriality and exposing the vast interests of their nationals in China, which have been built up on extraterritoriality, to the uncertainty of Chinese justice and the rapacity of Chinese warlords.

A heavy responsibility rests upon the treaty powers to see that justice is done China, without playing into the hands of its domestic exploiters. China cannot be dealt with as Great Britain, Germany or France or other well organized countries can be. Civilization in China is only skin deep. Westernization stops short a few miles out of the treaty ports. There has been no responsible government in China since the Manchus were ousted 20 years ago. The 400,000,000 or more people in China are a conglomerate of different races and tribes, with varying degrees of development from the highest to the lowest. They are incompetent to govern themselves in accordance with Western standards.

Admitting all that, China and the Chinese are entitled to as square a deal as circumstances will permit to be given them. Only it is well for Americans to remember, when they urge their Government to do this or that in China, that Occidental formulas do not run in that spacious and loosely jointed country. Sentimentality should have no place in the Shanghai negotiations. The Chinese are looking out for themselves. So are the Japanese. Americans should do no less.

PLAN OF DE VALERA

In outlining the objectives of his administration, Eamon de Valera, new president of the Irish Free State, includes a plan for a "merger" of Northern and Southern Ireland. He insists that the present condition of separatism cannot continue to exist, if only because it is uneconomical, arguing that the island now is obliged to support two sets of officials, including two prime ministers, and that there is "great inconvenience of the customs." "So," he concludes, "we must have a united Ireland."

In taking this position, de Valera reopens an ancient and highly disputatious question which his predecessors in office at Dublin have been content to let drowse.

Readers will recollect that one of the principal Nineteenth Century and early Twentieth Century obstacles in the way of settlement of the Irish controversy was the "Ulster question." Ulster, for reasons which seemed good to its people and its leaders, insisted upon snuggling up close to England. As they viewed the matter, they needed the protection of that Country against the remainder of Erin whose plans they distrusted. That is the reason Ireland is not "united" today.

Whether the old distrust has been dissipated and North Ireland has acquired a new feeling of kinship with, and confidence in, South Ireland, is a point that, perhaps, can be settled only through some sort of definite test. But on the face of things, de Valera seems to have a heavy job of persuasion ahead of him, in case he goes about seriously to "sell" his program for unity to the Ulstermen, particularly as it is not many years since he was arrested while trying to pass the Ulster frontier in order to pay that Country a visit.

THE WAR MIND

War is largely a state of mind. We will have war as long as we think in terms of war. The proverb "As a man thinketh in his heart so is he" may be applied to nations as well. The Earl of Oxford and Asquith was Prime Minister of England when the World War began. In his "Memories and Reflections," we find this statement: "Unless we can eliminate war, it will be the death of civilization and all that makes life individual life, communal life, international life—worth living. There can be no effective safeguard of the most treasured possessions and promises of our race until we have wiped international warfare off the slate of possibility. That is no Utopian ideal. As difficult, if you like, as unimaginable things have been done. Slavery, private war, dueling were all regarded in their day as natural and even necessary institutions. Why and how have they disappeared? Not by repression, not by coercion, but through the operation of moral force which sap their vitality, which discredited their authority, and which brought them, in due time, one and all their message of doom. So it will be when, by the same agencies, the curse of war becomes, as it will become, a memory of the past. The church can help to put into operation moral forces which will sap the vitality of the war spirit and discredit its authority."

IMPORTATION BAN

Secretary Mills states that the United States Government is without legislative authority to impose a general ban on the importation of products from Soviet Russia.

Congress will not be wise to give the Government that authority and demand that it exercise it. A general ban on imports from Sovietdom would be a boycott, as complete and vicious as some misguided citizens are now proposing that we shall initiate against Japanese trade.

We are not concerned with the condition of labor in Soviet Russia. We are concerned only with protecting American labor from competition in the American market by products of cheaper labor abroad. That is a matter for the tariff to deal with. General bans against particular countries are invidious and therefore to be avoided.

PARADISE LOST—1932

SENATOR FROM OKLAHOMA HOLDS BUT LITTLE FAITH IN "MAGIC OF POLITICS"

WASHINGTON—Except for an occasional brief, pithy remark, Senator Thomas P. Gore simply has sat and listened to his brother lawmakers thus far since congress met.

The blind Oklahoma man can talk when he chooses to do so. No congressional debater in recent years has surpassed the reputation he established during his senatorial decade and a half, from the "soon-er" state's admission until his fellow Democrats punished his blitzy opposition to President Wilson's post-war policies by refusing him a renomination. In 1920 they elected to forgive him. He had been a mighty champion of the farmers. Maybe they concluded that they needed him again.

The first thing Senator Gore did after his election was to take a special course at the Oklahoma agricultural college. Then he started on a tour of the farm belt. Most legislators are satisfied to understand their respective states' special problems. The blind senator traveled from the Gulf of Mexico to Winnipeg, with side trips totaling nearly 12,000 miles.

Finally he arrived in Washington, saying he felt reasonably competent to discuss the farm question in all its aspects.

However, congress convened with its mind occupied with other work, to which it seemed inclined to give the precedence over agriculture's troubles.

The farmers are clamorous enough, but they lack organization to push their desires with the energy shown by big business in its various forms—notably banking and urban industry.

Anyway, they have had to wait, pending legislative action on such matters as the creation of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, the broadening of Federal Reserve credit facilities and a decision upon as painless a method as possible to meet the federal budget's present deficit of a billion or so per annum.

In the meantime the highly agricultural Senator Gore simply has sat and listened, with no air of impatience whatever.

From a chat I had with him shortly after the session opened, my impression is that this philosophic calm is due mainly to the senator's firm conviction that nothing congress possibly can do will make much difference.

"As one of the country's political magicians," he told me, "I have small faith in the magic we practice."

"America and the rest of the world are paying for the war," he said. "In four years it consumed, directly and indirectly, approximately the equivalent of all the accumulated wealth of the United States. Naturally the entire world is correspondingly poorer and suffers in consequence."

"Trying to restore that wealth by act of congress or parliament or diet is like trying to legislate back the legs and arms of men crippled in battle."

"For urban folk as well as rural," continued the Oklahoma. "Relief from the depression will come through the healing processes of time, and through no more swiftly-working treatment—though government can remove some of the evils which retard recovery."

"Even tariff adjustment will be difficult, because other nations have been driven to retaliate against us. Every country is trying to make itself self-sufficient, including seven new ones of war creation. England itself, the cradle of free trade, has come to protection."

"It is possible," concluded the senator, "to say only this with certainty: 'When prices have reached their lowest and have remained at that level long enough to convince practically everyone that they assuredly will not sink lower, there will begin to be a resumption of normal buying.'"

"Children's Allowance"
By MRS. MARY MORTON
Most children are given an allowance for spending money. Some supervision by the parents in the spending of it is desirable.

School savings fostered by banks do much for the education of the child in thrift.

Parents seem to be divided as to the desirability of requiring the young child to earn part of his spending money. Some think that the child of tender years needs all the time, aside from school and sleep, for play. But the majority of parents seem in agreement that during the latter part of the elementary school years and during high school years, it is desirable that they make such effort, irrespective of the financial standing of the family.

Therefore, training in budgeting of the children will assure their education not only through the elementary schools, but on through high school and college as well. The planning is much more easily accomplished when the child is young, because then there is more time in which to accomplish the desired result, and the inroads on the monthly income or salary check will not be so large.

This early schooling establishes in the child a correct sense of values, good buying ability and thrift habits.

Good, Bad Features Of Diet

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The Hollywood diet, which had such a vogue among reducers a few years ago, was analyzed in this column yesterday.

On the average, the Hollywood diet gets 1,050 calories a day and about 40 grams of protein.

This is half an ordinary person's nutritional needs, and decidedly under the total daily protein requirements.

But since the diet continues only for 18 days, no harm is likely to be done by this. The diet should reduce a person rapidly and is a good enough example of a rapid reduction cure.

One prominent advantage that it has is psychological. It tells the reducer exactly what to eat every meal and since he knows it is going to last just 18 days, the regimen probably will be followed out. It is easier to do a definite stint like that than to go on a vague reducing diet for an indefinite time.

The length of time the Hollywood diet lasts is in accord with the most modern views of reduction systems. Many people tell me that they have been on a diet a week and at the end of the week time actually weigh the same as when they began. That observation is true, and has been found to be due to water retention in the body during the first few days of a reduction diet. You do not begin to see the good effects of a diet until after two weeks. So for that reason the length of time the Hollywood diet lasts is just right.

Aside from its monotony—one needs only to point to 47 half grapefruits in 54 meals to prove the sameness of the Hollywood diet—its worst fault is that it does not record the amount of its servings. "A few calories of salad dressing" might mean 50 calories or 200—said dressings are all rich. "A large T-bone steak" might be 150 or 300 calories.

And the amount of food you eat is the most important part of a reducing diet. Not what, but how much, you eat. The rule that has been given in this column several times:

"Eat only two-thirds of any helping that is given you" is still the best easy reduction rule for the middle-aged overweight.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS
G. B.: "Are there any canned fruits suitable for diabetics?"
Answer: Yes. Several firms market canned fruits preserved with saccharin instead of sugar. No sugar is added to the fruits. Saccharin is sweet without having any caloric value or sugar content. Peaches, pears, apricots, tomatoes, asparagus, spinach and tomato juice are canned in this way. In general, the fruits contain about 7-12 per cent of carbohydrate, preserved by this method. I have tasted them myself and know they are palatable and can hardly be distinguished from fruits preserved in the ordinary way.

Loves Married Man

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Miss Lee: I am very much in love with a married man. I am also married."

"We are both unhappy at home. We have no children. His wife is always nagging him and he says he is tired of it."

"He loves me very much and wants me to go away with him. We are only happy when we are together. He says he will do anything to make me happy. My husband doesn't care for me the way he does. He is very cold to me and in company he keeps knocking me, and hasn't a good word for me at any time. He never brings me anything, not even on a holiday."

"What can I do to make him love me? Or should I go away with the one I love so we two can be happy?"
"Undecided."

Maybe if you devoted yourself to your husband instead of letting this other man make love to you it might help in winning his love over again. Have you thought of that?

It would be a bit difficult for a husband to be very enthusiastic over a wife who admittedly cares for some one else.

And maybe if your boy friend made love to his wife instead of to you it might help to drive away that little habit of nagging his wife seems to have contracted.

The faults you complain of in your husband seem very trivial to me in view of your delinquency. If you really cannot get along with him, better divorce him before you run off with this other man and persuade your friend to do the same for his wife. Then you two marry and I'll be interested to know just how long your love for one another will last. If you run off together before you are free to marry you will surely not be happy as you would not be accepted in society and you would have no friends.

"Dear Virginia Lee: My family and friends have always told me that I have a marvelous voice and that I ought to sing in public. Do you have to be a pupil of a vocal teacher in order to sing over the radio and on the stage? Rosella."

You have to have some training to sing on the stage or over the radio, Rosella. And I advise you to have your voice tried out by a professional teacher before you believe all your family and friends say. Their opinion is not always to be relied upon.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am only 19 and married to someone I don't love. My husband is very good to me but he has a temper and is very jealous. He does not want me to go to dances. When I go somewhere by myself he says I'm gone to look for someone else and don't care for him."

"Before I met my husband I went with a boy that always told me he loved me, and I think he was the one for me. But my parents didn't want me to go with him because he wasn't my kind. I had a hard time giving him up. I always think of him and he says I still belong to him and he'll get me yet. I can stand and talk to him all day, but when my husband comes near me I get mad and just feel like going some place and never coming back. So please advise me what to do."

"M. F. K."

Queer that your husband is jealous, isn't it, when you openly acknowledge that you love this other man? I would advise you to divorce your husband and marry this other man. I don't know of any way to overcome your love for him so quickly and effectually. It's hardly fair, either, to live with a man feeling toward him as you do toward your husband.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I just want to put in a few words for 'Nappanese Blue Eyes' I am a girl in my teens and I neither drink nor smoke and I don't chase after the boys. I also know lots of other girls who do not. If 'Nappanese Blue Eyes' will open those eyes and take a good look he would see wonders."

Let us hope the young man will open his eyes and find some of these nice girls whom we know are all about him. Maybe there is something about him that fails to attract the better type of girl.

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

In the spring this column's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of the Cincinnati Reds.

Spring is now here, having arrived officially Sunday afternoon a little after 2 o'clock.

That being the case it may be suggested that fans in this old town will probably turn out again in large numbers to see Dan Howley's struggling team start its third attempt under Howling Dan's leadership to get up in the world, at least out of the cellar.

It makes not a bit of a difference to fans hereabouts how poor the Cincinnati team is one year; they always turn out en masse to root for the new one the next opening day.

"Canaries" has been suggested as an appropriate new name for the Brooklyn Club of the National League. And why not?

The Dodgers need a new nickname, now that Uncle Wilbert Robinson has been shunted into the discard.

During Uncle Wilbert's long regime as manager, they were known as the Robins, the sobriquet being taken from his name.

With Robbie out of the picture, Robins is a misnomer.

Max Carey being the new pilot, his full name—Carnarius—has suggested the title Canaries. They were birds as Robins—they'll still be birds as Canaries.

The Brooklynites have had numerous nicknames. Once upon a time when Ned Hanlon was their pilot, they were called the Superbas, because at that time Hanlon's Superbas were a theatrical extravaganza of national reputation.

Through the owner of the show troupe was not the same name as the baseball manager.

Later on they were called the Trolley-Dodgers, so called because everybody in Brooklyn is supposed to spend a major portion of his precarious life dodging street cars. This lengthy term was soon shortened to plain Dodgers.

"Canaries" sound well, and it is argued that the boys might even become Golden Canaries, if the proper attention were given to the choice of colors for their uniforms.

Professional tennis has only a trifling appeal to the public at large and small. At least, those who are in charge of the William T. Tilden Tours, Inc., are convinced this is so.

In his amateur days, "Big Bill" used to pack the stands whenever and wherever he was in action. Now he is a "pro" star, touring the country and playing with all the brilliance that characterized his youthful career. But, what of it? Even the most rabid tennis fan ask each other this question.

At the beginning of his barnstorming trip across country, giving exhibition matches in many cities, Tilden drew the crowds with his old magnetic force. The fans wanted to see him up against some of the best of the foreign competition. He beat this "pro" rivals with monotonous regularity.

So they booked him against Vincent Richards, his one-time pupil and later his rival in amateur days. Their matches were played before fair crowds—just fair. That was in New York. He moved on to Philadelphia, his home town, and the turnout was woefully slim.

Other cities he has visited, and the results have been the same. Somehow the populace simply can't get enthused about professional tennis and the actors and promoters of the Tilden project, who envisioned vast riches, appear destined to realize little more than acute headaches. Your sports citizenry is fickle.

CINCINNATI NOSED OUT BY ATHLETICS

TAMPA, Fla., March 21.—It took the American League champions the Philadelphia Athletics, 13 innings to beat the Cincinnati baseball club, 6 to 5, here Sunday.

Poor judgment cost the Reds an easy victory. The Athletics, playing a weak defensive game, offered numerous chances to tie the National League opponent. Philadelphia won the game on a double and a single in the 13th, but Cincinnati lost the game several innings earlier.

Pitcher Eppa Rixey of the Reds weakened in the ninth after his team had taken a three-run lead. A pass, three hits and an error by George Grantham permitted the Athletics to tie the score.

THREE TEAMS STILL UNDEFEATED AFTER FIRST ROUND GAMES

Grange Tournament Will Come To End Monday Night

Pleasant Grange of Bowersville, defending champion, Charley Grange and Spring Valley Grange were survivors of the first round of play in the second annual Grange basketball tournament at the Jefferson High School floor at Bowersville Saturday night.

Charity and Pleasant will clash in the semi-finals Monday night and the winner will play Spring Valley Grange in the Grange title an hour later. A consolation contest will be sandwiched in between the two games, the evening's program starting at 8 o'clock.

Spring Valley Grange won the preliminary round of competition, subduing Jamestown Grangers, 33 to 21, in the last game on the evening's program. Turner, forward, tallied ten points for the winners and Hines scored nine for Jamestown.

Preceding contests had resulted in a 23 to 19 triumph for Charity Grange over Xenia Grange, and a 32 to 26 victory for Pleasant Grange over Caesar Creek. Line-ups:

CADET RIFLE TEAM RATES A DIVISION AFTER FINE SHOOT

In the fifth and last match of the second series of bi-weekly inter-club matches, sponsored by the National Rifle Association, Junior Division, the O. S. and S. O. Home rifle team finished first, with a score of 493 out of a possible 500.

There were thirty-five teams in "B" division, representing different states.

By placing high in the "B" division in the fifth match, thereby winning 200 points, the Cadet team finished in the third place, totaling 560 points for third place in the second series. The third place trophy, in the form of a plaque, is now being engraved and will be sent to the team.

For the third series of five matches, getting under way during the week ending March 19, the team was moved up into the "A" division. This put the team in the class with the best junior rifle teams in the United States.

Lieutenant Perry D. Swindler, instructor of the cadet rifle team, received a letter from the National Rifle Association congratulating him and the team for these accomplishments.

The five high scores in the match were:

Glendon Lakes	100
Lewis Wine	99
Frank Alexander	98
Abraham Rowe	98
James Shifner	98

Total ..... 493

The American Bowling Congress tournament for 1933 will be held in the coliseum starting with the second week in March, according to present plans. The high school meeting probably will be held in another building here, although there is a possibility of it being taken to another city.

The 1932 high school tournament drew 17,000 spectators, a new record.

CENTRAL JUNIOR HIGH TEAM SETS UP COURT RECORD

Winning nineteen out of twenty games played and capturing first place in two junior tournaments is the remarkable record of 354 points as compared with 186 for opponents. Central juniors averaged eighteen points a game and held the opposition to an average of nine points.

Defeating a majority of the strongest junior teams in this part of the state, the team also won tournaments at Leesburg and Arcanum to put the finishing touches on a highly successful season.

H. Glenn Patterson, who has a knack of turning out formidable junior teams year after year, whether the material be scarce or abundant, coached the squad. He will have a dearth of material next season, however, losing his five regulars and two capable substitutes by promotion to high school.

Members of the junior squad, shown in the above picture, are: front row, left to right—Keith Muterpsaw, guard; Bob McCartney, guard; Nick Malavazos, center; Ted Rush, guard; Frank Huston, forward; Harold Flint, forward; Back row—Homer Turner, forward; Clay Messenger, center; Bob Dorman, center; Paul Leach, forward; and H. G. Patterson, coach. Seated in the foreground, left to right—John Skelley, "luck charm" of the squad; Junior

Smith, eighth grade manager; Jack Kennedy, seventh grade manager. Here is the team's season record:

The tournament, initiated by H. H. Corrothers, of the university's physical education department, may be held annually. Sixteen teams were represented, six of which were white teams.

As an added attraction on the evening program, the Springfield Monarchs girls' team played and defeated a Wilberforce feminine team, 14 to 8, in an exhibition contest.

Sharp-shooting of Hodges and Jones of the Toledo quintet brought about the decisive defeat of the Wilberforce cagers, whose attempts to score were constantly thwarted by the superior defensive play of the up-state team.

Following the championship final contest a trophy was presented Captain McCoglin, of the Toledo team, by Harry C. Graves, athletic director of Wilberforce.

Howard Clarke, captain of the runnerup team, was also given a trophy for his team. An award trophy for winning the consolation game was given to the Carter brothers of Dayton, who drubbed Cleveland 47 to 23, in the consolation contest to decide third place.

To progress to the finals, the Toledoans had eliminated the Cleveland entry, 34 to 28, and the "Black Hawks" had beaten the Carter brothers, 34 to 25, in the semi-finals.

WHOLESALE BUTTER

SPORT SNAP SHOTS

FRAMED
by Phil

In the spring this column's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of the Cincinnati Reds.

Spring is now here, having arrived officially Sunday afternoon a little after 2 o'clock.

That being the case it may be suggested that fans in this old town will probably turn out again in large numbers to see Dan Howley's struggling team start its third attempt under Howling Dan's leadership to get up in the world, at least out of the cellar.

It makes not a bit of a difference to fans hereabouts how poor the Cincinnati team is one year; they always turn out en masse to root for the new one the next opening day.

"Canaries" has been suggested as an appropriate new name for the Brooklyn Club of the National League. And why not?

The Dodgers need a new nickname, now that Uncle Wilbert Robinson has been shunted into the discard.

During Uncle Wilbert's long regime as manager, they were known as the Robins, the sobriquet being taken from his name.

With Robbie out of the picture, Robins is a misnomer.

Max Carey being the new pilot, his full name—Carnarius—has suggested the title Canaries. They were birds as Robins—they'll still be birds as Canaries.

The Brooklynites have had numerous nicknames. Once upon a time when Ned Hanlon was their pilot, they were called the Superbs, because at that time Hanlon's Superbs were a theatrical extravaganza of national reputation, though the owner of the show troupe was not the same name as the baseball manager.

Later on they were called the Trolley-Dodgers, so called because everybody in Brooklyn is supposed to spend a major portion of his precarious life dodging street cars. This lengthy term was soon shortened to plain Dodgers.

"Canaries" sound well, and it is argued that the boys might even become Golden Canaries, if the proper attention were given to the choice of colors for their uniforms.

Professional tennis has only a trifling appeal to the public at large and small. At least, those who are in charge of the William T. Tilden Tours, Inc., are convinced this is so.

In his amateur days, "Big Bill" used to pack the stands whenever and wherever he was in action. Now he is a "pro" star, touring the country and playing with all the brilliance that characterized his youthful career. But, what of it? Even the most rabid tennis fans ask each other this question:

At the beginning of his barnstorming trip across country, giving exhibition matches in many cities, Tilden drew the crowds with his old magnetic force. The fans wanted to see him up against some of the best of the foreign competition. He beat his "pro" rivals with monotonous regularity.

So they booked him against Vincent Richards, his one-time pupil and later his arch-rival in amateur days. Their matches were played before fair crowds—just fair. That was in New York. He moved on to Philadelphia, his home town, and the turnout was woefully slim.

Other cities he has visited, and the results have been the same. Somehow the populace simply can't get enthused about professional tennis and the actors and promoters of the Tilden project, who envisioned vast riches, appear destined to realize little more than acute headaches. Your sports citizenry is fickle.

CINCINNATI NOSED OUT BY ATHLETICS

TAMPA, Fla., March 21.—It took the American League champions the Philadelphia Athletics, 13 innings to beat the Cincinnati baseball club, 6 to 5, here Sunday.

Poor judgment cost the Reds an easy victory. The Athletics, playing a weak defensive game, offered numerous chances to its National League opponent. Philadelphia won the game on a double and a single in the 13th, but Cincinnati lost the game several innings earlier.

Pitcher Eppa Rixey of the Reds weakened in the ninth after his team had taken a three-run lead. A pass, three hits and an error by George Grantham permitted the Athletics to tie the score.

Bowling

There is nothing new in the Recreation League bowling race. It is the same old story with the Red Wings far outdistancing the balance of the field and owning a lead of eleven games. Matches in the Krippendorf League were cancelled last week. League standings:

THREE TEAMS STILL UNDEFEATED AFTER FIRST ROUND GAMES

Grange Tournament Will Come To End Monday Night

Pleasant Grange of Bowersville, defending champion, Charity Grange and Spring Valley Grange were survivors of the first round of play in the second annual Grange basketball tournament on the Jefferson High School floor at Bowersville Saturday night.

Charity and Pleasant will clash in the semi-finals Monday night and the winner will play Spring Valley basketball for the Grange title an hour later. A consolation contest will be sandwiched in between the two games, the evening's program starting at 8 o'clock.

Spring Valley Grange won the most decisive victory of the preliminary round of competition, subduing Jamestown Grangers, 38 to 21 in the last game on the evening's program. Turner, forward, tallied ten points for the winners and Hines scored nine for Jamestown.

Preceding contests had resulted in a 23 to 19 triumph for Charity Grange over Xenia Grange, and a 32 to 26 victory for Pleasant Grange over Caesar Creek. Line-ups:

CADET RIFLE TEAM RATES A DIVISION AFTER FINE SHOOT

In the fifth and last match of the second series of bi-weekly inter-club matches, sponsored by the National Rifle Association, Junior Division, the O. S. and S. O. Home rifle team finished first, with a score of 493 out of a possible 500. There were thirty-five teams in "B" division, representing different states.

By placing high in the "B" division in the fifth match, thereby winning 500 points, the Cadet team totaled 560 points for third place standing in the second series. The third place trophy, in the form of a plaque, is now being engraved and will be sent to the team.

For the third series of five matches, getting under way during the week ending March 19, the team was moved up into the "A" division. This put the team in the class with the best junior rifle teams in the United States.

Lieutenant Perry D. Swindler, instructor of the cadet rifle team, received a letter from the National Rifle Association congratulating him and the team for these accomplishments.

The five high scores in the match were:

Glendon Lakes	100
Lewis Wine	99
Frank Alexander	98
Abraham Rowe	98
James Shirner	98
Total	493

FORCED TO MOVE

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—The Ohio high school basketball tournament, next year probably will be held on some other court than that of the state fair grounds coliseum, where the schoolboy classic has been held since 1923.

The American Bowling Congress tournament for 1933 will be held in the coliseum starting with the second week in March, according to present plans. The high school meeting probably will be held in another building here, although there is a possibility of it being taken to another city.

The 1932 high school tournament drew 17,000 spectators, a new record.

CENTRAL JUNIOR HIGH TEAM SETS UP COURT RECORD

Winning nineteen out of twenty games played and capturing first place in two junior tournaments is the remarkable record of Xenia Central's junior high basketball team, composed of seventh and eighth graders, for the season just closed.

Considered the outstanding Central junior quintet in the school's history, the youngsters lost only one game—that to the O. S. and S. O. Home team by one point—and rolled up an imposing total of 354 points as compared with 186 for opponents. Central juniors averaged eighteen points a game and held the opposition to an average of nine points.

Defeating a majority of the strongest junior teams in this part of the state, the team also won tournaments at Leesburg and Arcanum to put the finishing touches on a highly successful season.

H. Glenn Patterson, who has a knack of turning out formidable junior teams year after year, whether the material be scarce or abundant, coached the squad. He will have a dearth of material next season, however, losing his five regulars and two capable substitutes by promotion to high school.

Members of the junior squad, shown in the above picture, are: front row, left to right—Keith Mutoranav, guard; Bob McCartney, guard; Nick Malavazos, center; Ted Rush, guard; Frank Huston, forward; Harold Flint, forward; Back row—Homer Turner, forward; Clay Messenger, center; Bob Dorman, center; Paul Leach, forward; and H. G. Patterson, coach. Seated in the foreground, left to right—John Skelley, "luck charm" of the squad; Junior

Smith, eighth grade manager; Jack Kennedy, seventh grade manager. Here is the team's season record:

Central 14, Waynesville frosh 9.
Central 34, Cedarville 1.
Central 21, Centerville 6.
Central 10, O. S. and S. O. Home 8.
Central 18, Yellow Springs 7.
Central 16, Spring Valley 9.
Central 23, Jamestown 8.
Central 10, O. S. and S. O. H. 11.

TOLEDO TEAM CAPTURES STATE AMATEUR BASKETBALL TOURNEY

Favored to win the state amateur basketball tournament staged on the Wilberforce University floor Friday and Saturday, Joe Van Morrey's Toledoans did not disappoint and defeated the "Black Hawks," local entry from Wilberforce, 44 to 25 in the tourney finals Saturday night.

Sharp-shooting of Hodges and Jones of the Toledo quintet brought about the decisive defeat of the Wilberforce cagers, whose attempts to score were constantly thwarted by the superior defensive play of the up-state team.

Following the championship finale contest a trophy was presented Captain McCoglin, of the Toledo team, by Harry C. Graves, athletic director of Wilberforce.

Howard Clarke, captain of the runner-up team, was also given a trophy for his team. An award for winning the consolation game was given to the Carter brothers of Dayton, who drubbed Cleveland 44 to 25 in the consolation game.

Willis, 49 to 32, in the consolation contest to decide third place. To progress to the finals, the Toledoans had eliminated the Cleveland entry, 34 to 28, and the "Black Hawks" had beaten the Carter brothers, 34 to 25, in the semi-finals.

As an added attraction on the evening program, the Springfield Monarchs' team played and defeated a Wilberforce feminine team, 14 to 8, in an exhibition contest.

The tournament, initiated by H. H. Corrothers, of the university's physical education department, may be held annually. Sixteen teams were represented, six of which were white teams.

FEAR OF KIDNAPERS GROWS AS SOLUTION CONTINUES REMOTE

Lindbergh home had no connection with the kidnapping case. They are Sam Cucchiari, barber, and Casper Oliver, farmer.

Henry (Red) Johnson, sailor, sweetheart of Betty Goo, the Lindbergh nurse, was back in Jersey City prison today after a prolonged reckoning on his story. The reckoning added nothing to police information, he said.

Schwartzkopf revealed that the state police had reported so far on 1,400 individuals questioned, or clues checked, since Charles Augustus Lindbergh Jr. was stolen from his crib the night of March 1.

STATE BASKETBALL CIRCLES GREET TWO NEW COURT CHAMPS

Akron West High and Castalia Win Annual Honors

COLUMBUS, O., March 21.—Two new names had been added today to the long list of Ohio high school basketball champions. The present title-holders are Akron West High in class A and Margareta of Castalia in class B, both of whom earned the honors in the state tournament here last week.

In the final tournament games, Akron West defeated Columbus North, 26 to 17, and Margareta downed Ostrander, 26 to 24.

MUNICIPAL COURT

THREE SENTENCED
Fines of $10 and costs and ten day jail sentences were imposed by Municipal Judge E. Dawson Smith Monday morning upon three men charged with petit larceny in connection with the theft of coal from along the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad tracks Saturday.

Those fined and jailed were: Francis Dudley, 26, of 25 Glad Ave.; Edgar Milburn, 22, of 47 Cent. St. and Delmar Pence, 18, of 805 W. Second St. Pence was found guilty and the other two pleaded guilty, following their arrest by railroad officers and police.

The trio was riding in an auto owned by Elbert Pence, 54, father of Delmar Pence, who was also arrested by police and fined $25 and costs by Judge Smith Monday on a charge the car was equipped with improper license plates. He pleaded guilty.

FISHERMAN FINED

Surrendering at police headquarters Monday, Jerome Jung, Springfield, arrested February 27 by E. D. Stroup, Greene County game warden, on a charge of fishing in Mad River without a license, was fined $25 and costs in Municipal Court and sent to jail in lieu of payment.

FINED AND JAILED

Found in a drunken stupor in a clump of bushes in the East End at 1:55 a. m. Sunday, Lester Roberts, 50, colored, 726 E. Main St., was fined $50 and costs and committed to jail on an intoxication charge.

Love Advice No Longer Secret; Now On Radio

By MILDRED MASON
"LAUGH and stay married!" That is the new formula for golden weddings advanced by Beatrice Fairfax, noted counselor on love and marriage, whose advice is now being broadcast over an NBC network through WLW, Cincinnati, every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at 11:30 a. m.

A joke a day keeps the divorce away Miss Fairfax advises—providing the joke is a new one and according to the consultant on heart and home problems a sense of humor is one of the main requirements the modern miss demands of her husband. In addition to her morning programs Miss Fairfax broadcasts her advice on Thursday evenings at 7:15 o'clock which is also heard through WLW, Cincinnati.

To Honor Goethe.

The 100th anniversary of the death of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, will be observed by Barnard College Columbia University in a program of speech and music to be heard over an NBC network Tuesday from 12:30 to 1 p. m. The program will be rebroadcast to Germany by shortwave. Featured on the program will be Madame Schumann-Heink who will sing a program of songs appropriate to the occasion.

Present Comic Opera.

"The Red Hussar", a comic opera in three acts, will be presented by the Young Artist Light Opera Co., over an NBC network Tuesday at 2:45 p. m. The action takes place during the reign of Queen Anne, when England was at war with France. The opera will not be available through a Cincinnati station.

For the Children.

The first of a series of two broadcasts to be known as "Chick-lick Fun" will be heard through station WKRC, Cincinnati, Tuesday at 4:45 p. m. The program will be presented as an Easter party where the Easter bunny will act as host, welcoming children and grown-ups to a "Magic Garden of Flowers." This program should be of special interest to the children.

Two Orchestras on Program.

Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, playing from New York, and Charlie Agnew and his orchestra, playing from Chicago, will be featured on a program to be broadcast over an NBC network through WSAT, Tuesday evening from 10 until 11 o'clock. Sings: Felix Herbert, (R.) of Rhode Island, will be guest speaker on the same program.

EVANGELIST OPENS REVIVAL SUNDAY AT XENIA OPERA HOUSE

Using as his text, "Ye are the salt of the earth and the light of the world," Evangelist P. W. Strong, Ft. Worth, Tex., preached to a large audience at the first of a series of revival services under auspices of the Church of Christ at the Xenia Opera House Sunday evening.

"The text, 'If the salt has lost its savor it is good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of man,' means that people inactive in the church are not fit for the kingdom of heaven and will be cast out and cannot enter the eternal home of the soul," explained the Rev. Mr. Strong. "A light put under a bushel instead of the table or candlestick represents people who have buried their talents so far as the Lord and church are concerned and give themselves to the service of the world. They, too, will meet the same fate."

Miss Mattie Wolford, who is assisting with the singing at the services, desires to meet a group of children who wish to take part in a Bible drill, every afternoon at 3:45 o'clock during the meetings. Each child who enters will be given a New Testament and a cash prize of $1 will be given the winner.

The meetings will continue through April 3.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

SENIORS
The senior class has had several problems to solve during the past two weeks. Two of the problems have been brought to a decision. The class has decided on its invitations and also has decided not to wear "caps and gowns" for graduation. The near future will see the seniors deciding on what to wear.

PICTURES TAKEN

The high school and other schools of the city had their pictures taken Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. These pictures will be shown in the Jean B. Elwell Auditorium next Tuesday night at 8:30 and 8:30. There will also be a matinee at 2:30. A Harold Lloyd comedy and a Felix the Cat cartoon will be shown in addition to the pictures. Price of admission will be 15c for elementary schools, 20c for high school students and 25c for adults. Children not going to school are admitted free to the show if accompanied by parents. The principal of each school will give a short talk concerning the pictures taken of their school.

Fortescue Defense

Lillian tried to pull away from the persistent fellow. He was not to be discouraged.

"Look," he said, "don't bother about a guy who'd give a queen like you the go-by."

He wrapped his fingers firmly about her arm just about the elbow. His head bent close to hers. His eyes were heavy-lidded and his tawny hair fell in a tousled unruly lock partly covering his brow. He had a way of running his fingers through the tousled lock, pushing it back.

He smiled into Lillian's frightened eyes. "Say, if you ain't a queen I'm a Chinaman."

"Oh—go away! I don't even know your name!" Lillian's hand pushed against the slick white bosom of his shirt.

"I don't know yours either. Let's get acquainted." He was drawing her near the dance floor. "Let's dance."

"Let me alone. I won't dance with you—I'm going home!"

"You danced with me while ago. Remember?"

Lillian didn't remember very clearly. There had been so many. She had been looking over their shoulders, trying to see Howard Marsh. Wondering why he didn't dance with her.

He had made her feel she was expected to dance with those who asked her. She felt as if she were the hostess of a party. Howard's and her party. Howard had somehow imparted a feeling of responsibility to her.

But he had gone home—and left her. Her heart became a bundle of aches. And her eyes stung.

The tawny haired young fellow said: "Snap out of it, baby!" And with a masterful tug he had her on the glassy dance floor, with his arm about her waist.

"Come on—step fast! Rip 'em up!"

The music blared and a saxophone screeched furiously. With the rapid beat of the wild music Lillian's partner swayed, stepped and syncopeated his movements. They moved with a combination of swing and hop. It was impossible not to follow his lead.

Everything whirled. The music grew madder and madder. The drums and the piano, the saxophones and the clarinets. Lillian's partner started into a series of

On the way to Honolulu, where he will assist Clarence Darrow in the defense of Mrs. Granville Fortescue and her three fellow-accused against the second degree murder charge, George S. Leisure, former chief of the criminal division of the United States District Attorney's office in New York, is shown just before he left the metropolis for Hawaii. Leisure takes the place of Dudley Field Malone in the defense line-up.

Wanted—Love! The Story of an Unemployed Girl

READ THIS FIRST:

Lillian Abbott finds the lure of New York and her hope of a career far more intriguing than the prospect of inheriting her father's millions and becoming a New England society girl. She runs away to New York, due to the persuasion of handsome Thomas Blane and decides to become another girl, a working girl. Blane, who was to direct her career as a movie star, turns out to be a girl racketeer; steals her money and disappears. Howard Marsh, dapper manager of the little hotel near Broadway where Lillian lives, takes her in tow. She is attracted to him, but he does not flatter her vanity by any sentimental response. He takes her to a dine and dance place and encourages her to dance with his friends. But when Lillian begins to wonder why he doesn't dance with her she discovers he has disappeared.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

"GONE HOME?" she repeated the answer Sherron had given, as a question.

He was a tall, angular man. Middle-aged, with thin gray hair. His eyes were light and shifty. Even when he smiled his face twisted unpleasantly.

"You don't mean—he couldn't have gone and left me here—alone—"

"Yeah," Sherron said. "He could. What's wrong with that?"

"But I—he brought me here!"

"How 'bout this dance?" a fellow who had danced with Lillian a little while earlier asked.

"No," she answered. "I'm not dancing—any more."

"Sure," said Sherron to the fellow, "she's dancing. Run along dance with him."

"But—I will! I'm going home!"

The orchestra struck up something particularly loud and fast. The youth caught at Lillian's arm. "Come on, little one. What's the matter with you? Somebody get your Irish up!"

Lillian's eyes sought Sherron's but his shifted, wandered over the crowd.

"Didn't Mr. Marsh leave any word, any message for me?" she sought Sherron again. He was starting to walk away. She caught at his sleeve.

"Said tell you to have a good time," Sherron told her, amusement twisting his face.

"But—how'll I get back to my hotel?" asked Lillian, frightened.

"I'll take you home—if that's all's worrying you," put in the young fellow still holding to Lillian's arm.

Lillian tried to pull away from the persistent fellow. He was not to be discouraged.

"Look," he said, "don't bother about a guy who'd give a queen like you the go-by."

He wrapped his fingers firmly about her arm just about the elbow. His head bent close to hers. His eyes were heavy-lidded and his tawny hair fell in a tousled unruly lock partly covering his brow. He had a way of running his fingers through the tousled lock, pushing it back.

Lillian grabbed at the chance to be out of the crowded, noisy room away from the dancers, away from the heavy-lidded, youthful chap who offered her fifteen dollars for the rest of the evening!

She fell in step with the girl who still held a protecting arm about Lillian. They walked to the door marked "Powder Your Nose."

As soon as they entered the little room Lillian was unable to suppress deep, heart aching sobs. The sympathy and kindness offered by this stranger somehow told Lillian she was an object of pity. She began feeling great sympathy for herself and for long minutes she allowed the flow of crystal clear tears to race down her cheeks unchecked.

"Too much wine?" the girl asked finally.

"No," said Lillian defensively. "I don't drink! I want to go home—"

"Well, is anybody stopping you?" It was unbelievable that a girl so well-dressed, so well spoken, who looked as if she had never wanted for a thing in her life... that she didn't even have subway fare.

fast turn. He held her against his slim, bony body as they whirled. He braced her with his body and his wiry long arm. His head bent against hers, his chin resting on her dark curls.

The rhythm and the savage beat of the music served as an intoxicant. Lillian's senses were sort of numbed.

And then, when the music got off on something like a waltz, the youth, between quick breaths said:

"Got a baby you've turned out to be! And do I love the way you shake your doggies!"

He relaxed his hold about her waist for a minute and then renewed it. As they danced by a table with some unoccupied chairs Lillian pulled herself free and dropped into one of the chairs.

"Aw," her partner said, sympathetically, "all tired out!" And he pulled a chair over beside her.

Lillian was almost breathless and she was conscious of stinging little pains in her feet, which were so much exposed by their thin-soled still-heeled satin sandals.

She reached down and stroked her ankle.

A short darkish man came over. "How 'bout finishing this one with me?" he asked her.

"No—thank you, I'm not dancing any more tonight."

He glowered at her and then looked at the tawny haired youth sitting so close to her.

The short darkish fellow said: "Oh, yeah?" with a smirk and walked away.

"Say, baby—give me all the rest of the evening, will you? I've only got fifteen dollars, but it's yours—"

As he talked he ran his hand into his trouser pocket and brought out several crumpled greenbacks. He pushed them over into Lillian's lap.

Lillian got up from the chair. She bit her lip. She clenched her fists.

What did he mean? Give him the rest of the evening... for fifteen dollars?

She began to reel. She thought she was going to fold up right there before she could move away from this heavy-lidded boy. She took a long step, her foot hung in the skirt, and she tripped.

She might have fallen to the floor only her hand caught the back of a chair.

With a startled exclamation, which turned to a friendly laugh, the girl occupant of the chair to which Lillian clung looked around.

"You'd better stay off of that Jerry say champagne," she said gaily.

But when she saw Lillian's face she got up quickly and ran a protecting arm about her shoulders.

"Oh, I'm sorry," she said, kindly. "May I help? The ladies' room is right over that gold and black screen. May I go along with you?"

"Yes," Lillian replied, responding immediately to the friendly tone of the girl, "that will be very kind of you."

Love Advice No Longer Secret; Now On Radio

By MILDRED MASON
Laugh and stay married! That is the new formula for golden weddings advanced by Beatrice Fairfax, noted counselor on love and marriage, whose advice is now being broadcast over an NBC network through WLW, Cincinnati, every Monday, Wednesday and Thursday at 11:30 a. m.

A joke a day keeps the divorce away Miss Fairfax advises—providing the joke is a new one and according to the consultant on heart and home problems a sense of humor is one of the main requirements the modern miss demands of her husband. In addition to her morning programs Miss Fairfax broadcasts her advice on Thursday evenings at 7:15 o'clock which is also heard through WLW, Cincinnati.

To Honor Goethe.
The 100th anniversary of the death of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, will be observed by Barnard College Columbia University in a program of speech and music to be heard over an NBC network Tuesday from 12:30 to 1 p. m. The program will be rebroadcast to Germany by shortwave. Featured on the program will be Madame Schumann-Heink who will sing a program of songs appropriate to the occasion.

Present Comic Opera.
The Red Hussar, a comic opera in three acts, will be presented by the Young Artist Light Opera Co., over an NBC net work Tuesday at 2:45 p. m. The action takes place during the reign of Queen Anne, when England was at war with France. The opera will be available through a Cincinnati station.

For the Children.
The first of a series of two broadcasts to be known as "Chick Chick Fun" will be heard through station WKRC, Cincinnati, Tuesday at 4:45 p. m. The program will be presented as an Easter party where the Easter bunny will act as host, welcoming children and grown-ups to a "Magic Garden of Flowers." The program should be of special interest to the children.

Two Orchestras on Program.
Vincent Lopez and his orchestra, playing from New York, and Charlie Agnew and his orchestra, playing from Chicago, will be featured on a program to be broadcast over an NBC network through WLW, Tuesday evening from 10 until 11 o'clock. Senator Felix Herbert, (R), of Rhode Island, will be guest speaker on the same program.

EVANGELIST OPENS REVIVAL SUNDAY AT XENIA OPERA HOUSE

Using as his text, "Ye are the salt of the earth and the light of the world," Evangelist F. W. Strong, Ft. Worth, Tex., preached to a large audience at the first of a series of revival services under auspices of the Church of Christ at the Xenia Opera House Sunday evening.

"The text, 'If the salt has lost its savor it is good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under foot of man,' means that people inactive in the church are not fit for the kingdom of heaven and will be cast out and cannot enter the eternal home of the soul," explained the Rev. Mr. Strong. "A light put under a bushel instead of the table or candlestick represents people who have buried their talents so far as the Lord and church are concerned and give themselves to the service of the world. They, too, will meet the same fate."

Miss Mattie Wolford, who is assisting with the singing at the services, desires to meet a group of children who wish to take part in a Bible drill, every afternoon at 3:45 o'clock during the meetings. Each child who enters will be given a New Testament and a cash prize of $1 will be given the winner.

The meetings will continue through April 3.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

SENIORS
The senior class has had several problems to solve during the past two weeks. Two of the problems have been brought to a decision. The class has decided on its invitations and also has decided not to wear "caps and gowns" for graduation. The near future will see the seniors deciding on what to wear.

PICTURES TAKEN
The high school and other schools of the city had their pictures taken Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. These pictures will be shown in the Jean B. Elwell Auditorium next Tuesday night at 6:30 and 8:30. There will also be a matinee at 2:30. A Harold Lloyd comedy and a Felix the Cat cartoon will be shown in addition to the pictures. Price of admission will be 15c for elementary schools, 20c for high school students and 25c for adults. Children not going to school are admitted free to the show if accompanied by parents. The principal of each school will give a short talk concerning the pictures taken of their school.

Fortescue Defense

On the way to Honolulu, where he will assist Clarence Darrow in the defense of Mrs. Granville Fortescue and her three fellow-accused against the second degree murder charge, George S. Leisure, former chief of the criminal division of the United States District Attorney's office in New York, is shown just before he left the metropolis for Hawaii. Leisure takes the place of Dudley Field Malone in the defense line-up.

Wanted—Love! The Story of an Unemployed Girl

READ THIS FIRST:
Lillian Abbott finds the lure of New York and her hope of a career far more intriguing than the prospect of inheriting her father's millions and becoming a New England society girl. She runs away to New York, due to the persuasion of handsome Thomas Blane and decide to become another girl, a working girl. Blane, who was to direct her career as a movie star, turns out to be a girl racketeer, steals her money and disappears. Howard Marsh, dapper manager of the little hotel near Broadway where Lillian lives, takes her in tow. She is attracted to him, but he does not flatter her vanity by any sentimental response. He takes her to a dine and dance place and encourages her to dance with his friends. But when Lillian begins to wonder why he doesn't dance with her she discovers he has disappeared.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)
"GONE HOME?" she repeated the answer Sherron had given, as a question.
He was a tall, angular man. Middle-aged, with thin gray hair. His eyes were light and witty. Even when he smiled his face twisted unpleasantly.
"You don't mean—he couldn't have gone and left me here—alone—"
"Yeah," Sherron said. "He could. What's wrong with that?"
"But I—brought me here!"
"How 'bout this dance?" a fellow who had danced with Lillian a little while earlier asked.
"No," she answered, "I'm not dancing—any more."
"Sure," said Sherron to the fellow, "she's dancing. Run along dance with him."
"But—I will not! I'm going home!"
The orchestra struck up something particularly loud and fast. The youth caught at Lillian's arm. "Come on, little one. What's the matter with you? Somebody get your Irish up!"
Lillian's eyes sought Sherron's, but his shifted, wandered over the crowd.
"Didn't Mr. Marsh leave any word, any message for me?" she sought Sherron again. He was staring to walk away. She caught at his sleeve.
"Said tell you to have a good time," Sherron told her, amusement twisting his face.
"But—how'll I get back to my hotel?" asked Lillian, frightened.
"I'll take you home—if that's all's worrying you," put in the young fellow still holding to Lillian's arm.

Lillian tried to pull away from the persistent fellow. He was not to be discouraged.
"Look," he said, "don't bother about a guy who'd give a queen like you the go-by."
He wrapped his fingers firmly about her bare arm just about the elbow. His head bent close to hers. His eyes were heavy-lidded and his tawny hair fell in a tousled unruly lock partly covering his brow. He had a way of running his fingers through the tousled lock, pushing it back.

He smiled into Lillian's frightened eyes. "Say, if you ain't a queen I'm a Chinaman."
"Oh—go way! I don't even know your name!" Lillian's hand pushed against the slick white bosom of his shirt.
"I don't know yours either. Let's get acquainted." He was drawing her near the dance floor. "Let's dance."

"Let me alone. I won't dance with you—I'm going home!"
"You danced with me while ago. Remember?"
Lillian didn't remember very clearly. There had been so many. She had been looking over her shoulders, trying to see Howard Marsh. Wondering why he didn't dance with her.

He had made her feel she was expected to dance with those who asked her. She felt as if she were the hostess of a party. Howard's and her party. Howard had somehow imparted a feeling of responsibility to her.

But he had gone home—and left her. Her heart became a bundle of aches. And her eyes stung.
The tawny-haired young fellow said: "Snap out of it, baby! And with a masterful tug he had her on the glassy dance floor, with his arm about her waist.
"Come on—step fast! Rip 'em up!"

The music blared and a saxophone screeched furiously. With the rapid beat of the wild music Lillian's partner swayed, stepped and syncretized his movements. They moved with a combination of a swing and hop. It was impossible not to follow his lead.

Everything whirled. The music grew madder and madder. The drums and the piano, the saxophones and the clarinets. Lillian's partner started into a series of fast turns. He held her against his slim, bony body as they whirled. He braced her with his body and his wiry long arm. His head bent against hers, his chin resting on her dark curls.

The rhythm and the savage beat of the music served as an intoxicant. Lillian's senses were sort of numbed.

And then, when the music got off on something like a waltz, the youth, between quick breaths said: "Wot a baby you've turned out to be! And do I love the way you shake your doggies!"

He relaxed his hold about her waist for a minute and then renewed it. As they danced by a table with some unoccupied chairs Lillian pulled herself free and dropped into one of the chairs.

"Aw," her partner said, sympathetically, "all tired out?" And he pulled a chair over beside her.

Lillian was almost breathless as she was conscious of stinging little pains in her feet, which were so much exposed by their thin-soled still-heeled satin sandals.

She reached down and stroked her ankle.
A short darkish man came over. "How 'bout finishing this one with me?" he asked her.

"No—thank you. I'm not dancing any more tonight!"
He glowered at her and then looked at the tawny haired youth sitting so close to her.

The short darkish fellow said: "Oh, yeah?" with a smirk and walked away.
"Say, baby—give me all the rest of the evening, will you? I've only got fifteen dollars, but it's yours—"
As he talked he ran his hand into his trouser pocket and brought out several crumpled greenbacks.

All Films Take Test—Only Few Rated Best

A travelogue and the talkie version of a Booth Tarkington novel supercede all other recent pictures in the opinion of the reviewing committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

The committee places at the top than in the artistic perfection of the approved list the film, "Zane Grey South Sea Adventures", a travelogue with description by Tom Geraghty and Wedgewood Norvell and "Business and Pleasure", which is what Fox calls its production of Tarkington's "The Plutocrat". It is a Will Rogers starring vehicle.

The reviewing committee also likes a number of other films, and true to the predictions made by Universal, it has given a high rating to "The Man Who Killed".

On the other hand at least three of these pictures are given high rating by the movie bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae. The bureau lists "The Beast of the City" and "Arsene Lupin" as "very good" and "The Secret Witness" as "good".

The foreword in the movie review of the General Federation of Women's Clubs regrets the change of the name of the film, "The Man Who Killed" to "Broken Lullaby," and says that those who concluded from the original name that the picture concerned war or crime, were responsible for the change in title.

Florence Vidor, ex-star, wife of Jascha Heifetz the violinist, is anticipating a "blessed event" next summer.

PASTOR TO CONDUCT SPECIAL SERVICES PRECEDING EASTER

The Rev. J. O. Kilmer, pastor of the New Burlington M. E. Church circuit, will conduct pre-Easter services at the New Burlington church Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings. It is announced. Churches included in the circuit are the Zoar church, south of Xenia, Sharon M. E. Church, near Kingman and the New Burlington church.

The Rev. Mr. Kilmer's subject Thursday evening will be "Facing Toward Calvary" and will be followed by a communion service. "Crucifixion" will be the subject Friday evening and Saturday evening the Rev. Mr. Kilmer will preach on "A Lost World." The services will start at 7:45 o'clock each evening.

Church services will be held at the New Burlington church Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock and the Rev. Mr. Kilmer's sermon theme will be "Some Implications of the Resurrection." A cantata, "Life Everlasting," will be presented at the New Burlington church Sunday evening at 8 o'clock by the combined choirs of the circuit with Lester Stanfield as director and Miss Mae McKay as pianist.

FLAMES DESTROY FARM RESIDENCE

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a six-room, two-story frame dwelling and its contents on the George Oglesbee farm, Ludlow Road, about eight miles northwest of Xenia, early Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wardlow, Waynesville, who became tenants on the property a week ago last Thursday, had gone to Mr. Holly to visit. All their household goods were destroyed. The total loss was not estimated but it was reported the furnishings were partly covered by insurance.

The blaze had enveloped the house when first noticed between 12 and 1 o'clock by Samuel Stewart, a neighbor. The residence burned to the ground. No other buildings were endangered.

TRUSTEES DELAY ACTION ON BIDS

Trustees of the O. S. and S. O. Home, meeting in special session at the institution Saturday, postponed making a recommendation for award of the general contract for the $125,000 nursery at the orphanage.

The trustees indicated they desire more time to investigate the nineteen bids under consideration. The board is expected to hold another special meeting prior to the regular April meeting, at which time a recommendation for award of the contract will be made to the state superintendent of public works.

TRICKS OF MOVIELAND

Fog Is Manufactured And Night Scenes Employ Artificial Devices

Night fires are easily filmed.

Actors glistening in mineral oil, used to make movie fogs.

An interesting study of a night scene during the war, filmed in Hollywood.

HOLLYWOOD, March 21.—Down the darkened movie street drifts a dense fog. Cameras turn silently as actors, glistening in the soft light, go about their business of creating drama.

Later, as the film is projected on the screen in hundreds of theaters, you visualize a dreary tenement district of a large city. The fact is, however, that the actors did not perform in a real water-vapor fog at all. They acted in a fog made of vaporized mineral oil blown through the air by large propellers.

In one scene fifteen barrels of mineral oil, the same kind sold in drug stores, was vaporized in a huge atomizer and thrown over the street to help make the wet mantle of gloom.

Eliminating Noise
In filming the long shot of the street, the scene was recorded on old-style silent cameras. Noise from the gasoline engines turning the propellers would have drowned out the dialogue. For the close-ups the wind machines were stopped and the fog permitted to drift.

"Mineral oil" fog hangs in the air sometimes a half-hour and realistic fog scenes, with conversation, can be filmed indoors. The fine particles of oil do not harm fine draperies, yet they cling to clothing and shine much better than does water. The trick of shooting night movies are many. In the past, before sound came to the screen, many time "night" scenes were shot under a noon-sun and later were tinted to give the dark effect.

Lighting is one of the most expensive night features to produce artificially and quite difficult to control. Each lightning flash costs at least $50. In one recent picture a machine resembling a donkey engine, connected with supplies of magnesium and cornstarch which were mixed in a hopper, shot bolts thirty feet into the air. Here, the magnesium gives the flash while cornstarch provides the body of the lightning.

Use Phones During Scene
In one of the greatest scenes ever shot at night four cameras were pointed down a 1,200-foot street which had been constructed on a movie ranch north of Hollywood. Here the lighting problem was so complex and the necessity for many actors and extras to do so many things without stopping the cameras was so acute that a complicated telephone system was devised.

The head electrician stood by the cameras. At five street intersections other electricians wore ear phones, with mouthpieces connected by wire to phones worn by other electricians mixing with the crowd. As the cameras turned the head electrician ordered lights cut in and out and the workmen in full view of the cameras made and broke many connections, yet none of them appeared in the completed picture.

Hollywood's electrical wizards can take their huge portable sets anywhere on a moment's notice and provide light on a mountain top or at the sea's bottom.

RESIDENCE SOLD; SECOND LACKS BIDS

Residence property in Bellbrook which had an appraised value of $2,000 was purchased for $1,333.33, exactly two-thirds of the appraisal, by Chief Deputy Sheriff Walton Spahr at an administrator's sale Saturday morning at the Court House.

The property was sold on the application of John Lamme, as executor of the estate of Mary F. Lamme, deceased.

Second effort to sell the Holverson residential property at 433 S. Columbus St., at an administrator's sale Saturday, failed again for lack of bidders. The property was originally appraised at $2,000 and when the premises failed to bring bids for two-thirds of this amount, a reappraisal lowered the value to $1,500. No bids were offered of two-thirds this sum, however, George E. Dice is the administrator.

Wilberforce News

Mr. W. W. Russell left for Baltimore Thursday evening. Mr. Earl Diggs spent the weekend in Charleston, W. Va.

Miss Wanda Duke and Mr. William T. Lathan will spend their spring vacation in Cleveland.

Mr. E. E. Gibson spent the weekend in Eaton with his parents. Messrs. Beckett, Anderson, Alphonso Hart, J. Clifton and Charles Beckett left for Philadelphia Friday morning to spend the spring vacation.

Miss Mattie P. Huntley and Mr. Maxwell Brooks completed their respective courses in the school of education at the close of the winter quarter.

Mr. Robert Ewalt, Jr., visited his aunt, who is a patient at Clark County Sanitarium, Springfield, last Saturday.

Miss Jo Anna Walker spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Walker of Mt. Vernon, Ohio.

The Rev. Raven F. Boyd, senior, Payne Theological Seminary, preached his farewell sermon Sunday afternoon at 3:45 at the seminary.

Passion services will be conducted by the instructors and students of Payne Theological Seminary beginning Monday evening at 6:30. Special sunrise services will be held on Easter Sunday morning at 6 o'clock, with the Rev. Leonard Blake as speaker.

The Wilberforce Players under the direction of Coach Mack M. Green, are rehearsing two three-act plays entitled "The Show-Off" and "Sun Up." We shall anticipate an enjoyable evening in the very near future. The "Players" have given performances in Wilberforce, Xenia, Dayton, Columbus and Cincinnati.

Friends of Mr. Reverend C. Ransome, III, were glad to see him return for the spring quarter last Sunday. Mr. Ransome had to withdraw from school at the end of the fall quarter because of illness. He has been in Oceanport, N. J., and Columbia, S. C., recuperating during the last few months.

The Inter-Fraternal Council gave its annual prom in Beacon Gym Wednesday evening. The gym was decorated beautifully and artistically which added much to the occasion. The color scheme was effectively carried out in the colors of the various fraternities and sororities on the campus which composed the members of the council. The music was furnished by Lloyd Byrd's Californians until 10:30 p. m.

Tuesday morning, at the regular chapel services, Miss Mabel F. Hall, teacher in the physical education department, presented the "Good Posture Ribbon" to Miss Sarah Brown for 1932. Miss Hallie Q. Brown Honored

A most enjoyable evening was spent March 10 at Homewood Cottage, where a party of friends surprised Miss Hallie Q. Brown on her birthday anniversary. The evening was spent in viewing pictures of classes, buildings and other remembrances of by gone days at dear old Wilberforce University. Miss Brown was presented with an attractive reading lamp. The following persons made the surprise: Dean and Mrs. McGinnis, Prof. and Mrs. Fisher, Prof. and Mrs. White, Mrs. M. Chavous, Mrs. S. Lane, Mrs. A. Finley, Mrs. C. Harris, Mrs. L. Mason, Mrs. M. Valentine, Mrs. J. Thomas, Mrs. E. Woodson, Miss G. Woodson, Mrs. O. Ginn and Mrs. M. Newsome and Mrs. Pearl Thompson.

The octette accepted an invitation given by Bishop Paul Jones of Antioch College to appear on the program for vespers services Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

The Rev. R. S. Brown, Mr. Dwight Williams and the Rev. J. O. Heathcox, all of Cleveland and the Rev. J. F. Williams of Cincinnati, members of the trustee board, C. N. and I. Department, acting as a special committee to formulate rules and regulations for the betterment of the department, spent Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday at the school.

Mr. William Hunnicutt was in Springfield Sunday and attended a meeting of the Shriners, who will hold the annual sermon in this lodge room, the second Sunday in July. The women's branch of the Masons has invited the Knight Templars to join it in holding services Easter Sunday in the Second Baptist Church, Springfield.

Mesdames Sunle Green, Olivette David, Alma Warrick and Mae Newsome have charge of the Sunday School children and are drilling them to present "Garden of Easter" in Galloway auditorium, Easter Sunday, March 27.

Miss Hallie Q. Brown attended the annual Greene County Fish and Game banquet at the Xenia Masonic Temple, Thursday evening. Miss Brown is a personal friend of former Governor Cooper, one of the speakers, and is interested in his campaign for re-election this fall.

PASTOR TO CONDUCT SPECIAL SERVICES PRECEDING EASTER

The Rev. J. O. Kilmer, pastor of the New Burlington M. E. Church circuit, will conduct pre-Easter services at the New Burlington church Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings, it is announced. Churches included in the circuit are the Zion church, south of Xenia, Sharon M. E. Church, near Kingman and the New Burlington church.

The Rev. Mr. Kilmer's subject Thursday evening will be "Facing Toward Calvary" and will be followed by a communion service. "Crucifixion" will be the subject Friday evening and Saturday evening the Rev. Mr. Kilmer will preach on "A Lost World." The services will start at 7:45 o'clock each evening.

Church services will be held at the New Burlington church Sunday morning at 9:30 o'clock and the Rev. Mr. Kilmer's sermon theme will be "Some Implications of the Resurrection." A cantata, "Life Everlasting," will be presented at the New Burlington church Sunday evening at 8 o'clock by the combined choir of the circuit with Lester Stanfield as director and Miss Mae McKay as pianist.

FLAMES DESTROY FARM RESIDENCE

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed a six-room, two-story frame dwelling and its contents on the George Oglesbee farm, Ludlow Road, about eight miles northwest of Xenia, early Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Wardlow, Waynesville, who became tenants on the property a week ago last Thursday, had gone to Mt. Holly to visit. All their household goods were destroyed. The total loss was not estimated but it was reported the furnishings were partly covered by insurance.

The blaze had enveloped the house when first noticed between 12 and 1 o'clock by Samuel Stewart, a neighbor. The residence burned to the ground. No other buildings were endangered.

TRUSTEES DELAY ACTION ON BIDS

Trustees of the O. S. and S. O. Home, meeting in special session at the institution Saturday, postponed making a recommendation for award of the general contract for the $125,000 nursery at the orphanage.

The trustees indicated they desire more time to investigate the nineteen bids under consideration.

The board is expected to hold another special meeting prior to the regular April meeting, at which time a recommendation for award of the contract will be made to the state superintendent of public works.

BELLBROOK

Oliver Penewit has moved to Spring Valley.

It is reported that the protracted meeting now in progress at the Town Hall will continue for another week.

Willis Black and family are moving to the village.

Henry Clay one of our local fishermen appeared on the street last week with the first catch of the season, two white suckers, three black suckers and one bass.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Rogers entertained company from abroad this week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Black are arranging to move to the Kinder property near town.

Oscar Woods and Harry Underwood were Bellbrook visitors last week.

W. E. Glosser, who has been housed up for several days, is able to be out again.

S. O. Hale of Xenia, was a Bellbrook visitor one day of the past week.

Dr. W. C. Clark, who recently located here, reports that he is well pleased with the prospects of a good practice in the neighborhood.

Fog Is Manufactured And Night Scenes Employ Artificial Devices

Night fires are easily filmed.

Actors glistening in mineral oil, used to make movie fogs.

An interesting study of a night scene during the war, filmed in Hollywood.

HOLLYWOOD, March 21.—Down the darkened movie street drifts a dense fog. Cameras turn silently as actors, glistening in the soft light, go about their business of creating drama.

Later, as the film is projected on the screen in hundreds of theaters, you visualize a dreary tenement district of a large city. The fact is, however, that the actors did not perform in a real water-vapor fog at all. They acted in a fog made of vaporized mineral oil, blown through the air by large propellers.

In one scene fifteen barrels of mineral oil, the same kind sold in drug stores, was vaporized in a huge atomizer and thrown over the street to help make the wet mantle of gloom.

Eliminating Noise

In filming the long shot of the street, the scene was recorded on old-style silent cameras. Noise from the gasoline engines turning the propellers would have drowned out the dialogue. For the close-ups the wind machines were stopped and the fog permitted to drift. "Mineral oil" fog hangs in the air sometimes a half-hour and realistic fog scenes, with conversation, can be filmed indoors. The fine particles of oil do not harm fine draperies, yet they cling to clothing and shine much better than does water.

The trick of shooting night movies is many. In the past, before sound came to the screen, many "night" scenes were shot under a noon-sun and later were tinted to give the dark effect.

Lighting is one of the most expensive night features to produce artificially and quite difficult to control. Each lighting flash costs at least $50. In one recent picture a machine resembling a donkey engine, connected with supplies of magnesium and cornstarch which were mixed in a hopper, shot bolts thirty feet into the air. Here, the magnesium gives the flash while cornstarch provides the body of the lightning.
